It's November, and so I'm writing a book.

You may have heard of National Novel Writing Month. Until earlier this year, it was an official organization called NaNoWriMo, and it had almost 400,000 participants. The goal was to write 50,000 words in the month of November, and people of all ages and from all over the world participated.

But the organization got a little too big to monitor properly. At least one volunteer behaved badly, and the board was slow to act. The organization had no idea how to deal with AI. (If 50,000 words are written by artificial intelligence in 30 seconds, does it count?)

Eventually, the organization closed its doors, and I was one of many participants who were sad because, while I write almost every day, it was fun, one month of the year, to know I had lots of company.

Having a big goal can be a lot of fun. Writing 50,000 words in a month means I must write 1,667 words a day. It's a stretch for most writers, and I loved the feeling that I was surrounded by people as excited about putting words on paper as I am most months of the year.

I was talking to someone about setting goals yesterday. We agreed it was hard for most people to set goals, not because they don't know what they want, but because they aren't sure what the first step would look like and, somewhere early on, they get worried that they are headed in the wrong direction.

I think that was what was so fun about NaNoWriMo. There was a graph. There was a big, exciting graph, and when I hit milestones, I earned a badge that everyone could see. Of course, the words might be terrible. But they were counted up and recorded, and I had the badges to prove it!

Not all goals are quite this satisfying. Most goals involve a little dithering. The plan has to be altered. There is a step backward after two steps forward. There are obvious failures when, as optimistic as I try to be, I know I have hit a setback.

Last week, a book I'd written was reject-

Easy and Delicious Sides to Spruce Up Holiday Weeknights

(Family Features) — Holiday feasts may get a lot of attention, but there's no reason to overlook regular weeknight meals - or save your favorite sides for the main event - during the busy holiday season. These easy, go-to sides can spruce up your dinner routine, even on hectic weeknights.

Try these Cheesy Baked Little Potatoes for an easy, delicious side that brings a little holiday happiness to regular family mealtimes. Halved Little Potatoes are seasoned and roasted to perfection, creating a crispy-on-the-outside, tender-on-the-inside dish. Perfect for a weeknight dinner during this busy season, it's a versatile, easy-to-prepare complement to an array of main courses.

Mashed potatoes are a familiar sight at the table this time of year, but you can spruce them up with these Goat Cheese and Thyme Mashed Potatoes. A classic dish that's quick and easy to prepare, they make getting dinner on the table a breeze and bring a little calm during an otherwise busy season.

Sustainably grown on family farms, Little Potatoes from The Little Potato Company simplify weekday mealtimes during the hustle and bustle of the holiday season. They come pre-washed, require no peeling and are small enough they don't need to be cut, allowing for less time in the kitchen and more time at the table enjoying moments with family and friends.

Plus, they're a fresh whole food packed with nutrients you can feel good about serving - balancing the rich, decadent indulgences of the holidays. They cook in as little as 5 minutes as a weeknight

CHEESY BAKED LITTLE POTATOES

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 15 minutes
Servings: 4

INGREDIENTS

1 1/2 pounds Little Potatoes (any variety)
1 1/3 cups sharp cheddar cheese, grated small
1/2 cup cream
1 teaspoon garlic powder
5 sprigs thyme
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

DIRECTIONS

Preheat oven to 400 F.

Pierce potatoes with fork and microwave for 7 minutes. Cut in half and place cut side up in parchment-lined 9-by-13-inch baking dish.

In a bowl, mix cheese, cream, garlic powder, thyme, salt and pepper. Pour over potatoes, spreading cheese evenly.

Bake for 10 minutes then broil 3-5 minutes until golden brown.

go-to solution to make the whole family happy. Available in the produce section, their convenience adds a bit of peace to the kitchen and brings little moments of happiness during the holiday season.

ed for publication. I had great hopes that it would be published in the not-too-distant future. It was rejected with a lot of kind words and perhaps even a little reluctance, but it was still rejected, and now I don't know if that book will ever find a home. This was a disappointment. I don't earn any badges for this.

But I try, as I always do, to look for the learning in the disappointment. I certainly learned a lot about writing while writing that book. But I try to learn something about the disappointment as well, because I've noticed when things are going great and I get one badge after another, I don't actually learn a whole lot—no matter how fun and motivating it might be.

And I think the lesson in this particular disappointment is rather simple. It's something I thought I already knew but needed to be reminded of once again.

It doesn't really matter what I've done. All that matters is how I spend today. If I am writing today, then I am doing everything I can to earn more badges in the future.

So I'll be participating in Novel November in whatever form it appears this year. I'll be tracking my words and collecting any badges available—as if this were the first book I've ever written because, in truth, it is the only one that matters.

*Till next time,
Carrie*

Delivering What Matters Most This Holiday Season

(Family Features) — As families prepare for the holidays, presents and packages fill doorsteps seemingly on demand. For millions of children around the world, however, each delivery carries more than convenience - it carries purpose.

For example, UNICEF continues its lifesaving work, delivering essentials like nutrition, shelter and warm clothes to children who need it most. From Sudan to Ukraine, Gaza to Malawi and beyond, the organization delivers more than just supplies - it provides a hopeful future for children around the world. When conflict unfolds, when disaster strikes or when the winter cold hits, the organization's critical aid is never out of reach, even for the world's hardest-to-reach children.

This holiday season, give a gift that matters. With UNICEF Market and Inspired Gifts, you can bring education and lifesaving tools to children around the world. An Art Therapy Kit can give children an outlet needed to heal while a Math Classroom Kit can open doors to brighter futures. Through The K.I.N.D. Fund - now celebrating its 15th anniversary - you can support education in Malawi by providing children with desks and scholarships to help kids go beyond elementary school learning levels.

You can send Essential Winter Kits - filled with clothing - to ensure children stay safe through the cold months. Every gift fuels the mission of pursuing a more equitable world for every child. These partner gift ideas also support the organization's global work:

Your Marriott Bonvoy points can protect and care for children worldwide. From Dec. 2-9, the travel company will match five points for every point members donate to philanthropic partners, up to 25 million total points. Furthermore, members who earn 50 or 75 qualifying nights in a calendar year are eligible to select UNICEF to benefit from their Annual Choice Benefit with a $100 USD donation. Learn more at giving.marriott.com.

Give the gift of holiday radiance with The Serum by ClÈ de Peau BeautÈ. Whether you are treating yourself or a loved one, this gift is sure to spread some cheer. Since 2019, the brand has proudly donated $14.5 million total to UNICEF to support girls' education and empowerment around the world. Find out how you can help unlock the power of girls at cledepeaubeaute.com.

To help tackle the stigma around poor mental health and provide support for children, young people and caregivers globally, Jo Malone London will donate a minimum of 70% of the recommended retail price from each Charity Home Candle sold to the U.S. Fund for UNICEF with a commitment to raise at least $200,000 from July 1, 2025 by June 30, 2026.
