WHERE PEOPLE CAN THRIVE

Our sustainability model

We follow a 'fabric first' approach to the construction of our homes. Our focus is on energy efficient insulation, construction, ventilation, and detailed design that ensures not only eco-friendly solutions, but an efficient and comfortable living environment. Our methods help you save money over time whilst reducing your carbon footprint, without sacrificing the aesthetics of your new home.

A bee brick is a specially designed brick featuring cavities, that provides nesting space for solitary bees, particularly non-swarming species like red mason and leafcutter bees. It can be used in place of a standard brick in construction or as a standalone bee house.

A Natural Haven for Wildlife & Biodiversity

We believe that building homes shouldn't come at the expense of the local flora and fauna. Living amongst nature has proven beneficial for people's physical and mental wellbeing, creating wildlife friendly elements is a key factor in this healthy and new community. Collaton Park's design uses the valley landform to incorporate sustainable drainage in the form of swales and basins with more than half of the entire site dedicated to outdoor space. This development has committed to extensive ecology and biodiversity improvements to maximise the opportunities for all wildlife to thrive.

Collaton Park supports biodiversity through its extensive green spaces and pond. We have carefully placed footpaths that avoid disturbance to local wildlife, in addition to planting native trees across the site. The development has incorporated a sensitive lighting strategy that is not only energy efficient, but also avoids excessive disturbance to nocturnal birds and mammals. The development also features a unique wildlife tower, carefully designed to attract and house roosting bats, owls and other birds.

Devon is incredibly lucky to have some special bats that you often don't find in the rest of the country including Lesser and Greater Horseshoes, Nathusius Pipistrelles and Grey Long Eared bats. Devon supports such a significant proportion of UK bat species because of its mild climate, its diverse landscape, with a complex pattern of different natural and farmed habitats for feeding and roosting, and its generally low levels of light pollution. Collaton Park makes significant efforts to support the local bat population through lighting and roosting support.

As a low density scheme the development's surrounding ecosystem features species-rich grassland, insect friendly planting, and even hedgehog highways for these protected species. Even if you prefer not to dig in your garden or allotment, there is a place to unwind beside the water or wander through the orchard, right on the doorstep for all residents. Spaces where you can watch the fascinating activities of birds, animals and insects as they thrive around you.
