WOMEN'S BUILDING

◆ Honoring the Work That Holds Us ◆

This Latinx Heritage Month, we begin by celebrating someone whose work has sustained our own community for 13 years: Lore. For more than a decade, she has cared for the spaces where thousands of people gather to learn, organize, celebrate, and find community. Thank you, Lore, for everything you do.

Her anniversary invites us to recognize the labor that too often remains unseen. Latinas make up roughly 29% of domestic workers and more than 60% of house cleaners in the United States, work that is often underpaid, physically demanding, and exposed to health risks.

At TWB, we operate from the simple and powerful belief that care work sustains the world. This month, let's celebrate Latinx heritage by recognizing Latina workers, valuing their labor, and standing for their rights. Support our work at womensbuilding.org

◆ Keeping MaestraPeace Alive ◆

The latest restoration of MaestraPeace is complete, but caring for a mural of this scale does not end when the brushes are put away.

In our latest video, muralists Juana Alicia and Meera Desai take us behind the restoration. What began with visible cracks and fading revealed deeper damage, including moisture beneath the paint, deteriorating stucco, and sections that required concrete repair and repainting.

Their reflections remind us that preserving MaestraPeace requires skilled labor, materials, close attention, and continued care. It also means protecting a work created by women whose visions have watched over our building and neighborhood for more than three decades.

Watch the video series, hear directly from the muralists, and help us keep MaestraPeace cared for for the generations still to come. Support its conservation at womensbuilding.org

◆ Ella Se Conecta Next Session ◆

Ella Se Conecta is back for its third session! This Spanish language workshop for women will focus on Computer 101, with practical tools to feel more comfortable using a laptop and staying organized online.

Participants will explore laptop basics, learn how to navigate email, and set up Google Calendar to organize appointments, tasks, and everyday plans.

◆ In Our Own Words series is back! ◆

Our In Our Own Words series is back. As Latinx Heritage Month begins, our colleague Jasmin Flores shares how her roots as a first generation Mexican American woman brought her to The Women's Building, first as a volunteer and later as a Family Reunification Case Manager.

Jasmin writes about the moments when shared culture builds trust and why community can matter as much as services. She also shares a hope we carry with her: a future where immigrant families can live without fear and spaces like ours have the resources to remain here.

💜 Read Jasmin's story here, share it, and support the work that keeps this community space going.

Where I Found the Community I Wanted to Build

◆ Volunteer With TWB ◆

Our work is possible because people believe in it and choose to be part of it. We are currently looking for volunteers to join two essential community services at TWB.

Support our Food Pantry on Monday mornings, helping distribute fresh food with care and dignity, or join our Community Resource Room Front desk, connecting people with housing, employment, legal, health, and other resources.

Both roles require English and Spanish and a commitment to our community.

Interested? Contact Citlali Ramos at citlali@womensbuilding.org or click here to learn more and apply.

◆ Yoga Is Back ◆

 A reminder that our community yoga classes are happening every Wednesday from 2:00 to 3:00 PM at TWB.

Led by Majo García, these Spanish language sessions are part of SanArte: Community Wellness for Mind, Body, and Spirit, a program created by and for Latina women.

Join us and make space for movement, connection, and collective care.
