MARKET PRICING UPDATE

Subject: Corrugated Market Increase
Date: September 21, 2026

Dear Valued Customer,

This announcement is to make you aware that the major integrated corrugated producers, Packaging Corporation of America, International Paper, Smurfit Westrock, and Georgia Pacific have announced a $70-$140 per ton price increase for September 1, 2026. As a result, Pulp and Paper Week has recognized $70/ton of the announced increase in their September publication. This is in addition to the cumulative $100/per ton increase published in the March, April and June publications, bringing the total to $170/ton in increases.

These are unprecedented increases in the corrugated market. They are driven by a reduction in supply from the major integrated producers (10%), coupled with diesel increases, truck driver shortages, and healthcare inflation.

Based on the announced market increase, as well as cost pressures on labor, warehousing, trucking (diesel), material handling, and overhead costs, SupplyOne will increase pricing of corrugated items effective with orders for deliveries on or after Monday, November 2rd.

All customers with specific contractual arrangements relative to minimum notification periods will be honored. Your salesperson and/or your customer service representative will be in contact with your organization regarding specific pricing, as it relates to your account.

I encourage all customers to work with their sales representation for clarity on the percentage and the ways to help reduce cost: increasing order quantity, removing material, re-designing, and packaging automation ideas. We remain committed to long-term relationships and supporting our customers through this complex inflationary period.

Sincerely,

Jamey Nolan
