

I'm not robot

Pierre jovanovic livre de poche

Paco oliva gibraltar.

The biggest lie in religious history is the story in the Book of Genesis about Eve being created from Adam's rib and causing humanity's downfall by eating the forbidden fruit. However, a Sumerian tablet (dating back 1,500 years before the invention of Hebrew writing) reveals that the author of the Book of Genesis plagiarized and modified the text to punish women. The "serpent" was actually a counselor who encouraged a god to seduce young goddesses, leading to his downfall in a garden by eating poisonous plants. He was cursed by a goddess, and from his rib, another goddess was born. This plagiarism, supposedly dictated by God to Moses, has been universally spread by Hebrews, Saint Paul, and Saint Augustine, leading to the vilification, guilt-tripping, and manipulation of men and women through the "original sin" accusation, which is ultimately a lie. The author also references a book that examines the Sumerian tablet's history, literary adaptation, correspondence table, and original translation by Professor Attinger, an Assyriologist from the University of Bern. In a separate section, the text describes a new book about the life and work of Archangel Gabriel, who loved women. The book is written by Pierre Jovanovic and follows Gabriel's journey through time, tracing his encounters with famous figures in religious history. Gabriel embarks on a timeless journey, accompanied by the most renowned figures in religious history. This biography is a pioneering work, as no author has previously explored Gabriel's life and accomplishments, including his affection for women. Review quotes from our booksellers! You might also enjoy Recent products viewed Organize comments by type Highest ratings Most recent Highest ratings reviews