Story of the Instrument:

A dry riverbed stretches across the desert floor, its cracked surface glowing under a merciless sun. The air shimmers, heavy and motionless, as the heat presses down without relief. Yellow light floods everything, relentless and absolute. Gradually, the world begins to shift. The horizon softens, edges dissolve, and colors drift away from their natural order. Magenta appears like a distant echo - unreal, suspended somewhere between vision and illusion. For a fleeting moment, the landscape exists in a fragile state, balanced between clarity and collapse.
