

Summit Value for Public Leaders: Policy with Community at the Center

Policy and Public Sector Education Leaders

Event Overview:

Each year, LatinxEd hosts the North Carolina Latine Education Summit, an annual statewide gathering of education leaders, community advocates, policymakers, and allies. During this powerful multi-day event, leaders move beyond dialogue to collective action, developing strategies, and mobilizing resources to meet the real educational challenges facing students and families across North Carolina.

Why Attend:

- Hear directly from educators, students, and families driving change in their communities.
- Explore policy approaches that reflect lived experiences, not just numbers or assumptions.
- Build authentic, cross-sector partnerships to drive long-term educational success.

Real change requires representation. We need decision-makers who not only understand our communities but also reflect them. The Summit centers the voices, leadership, and lived experiences of historically underrepresented communities, creating space for policy leaders to walk alongside, not ahead of, those driving solutions on the ground. Participants will gain a deeper understanding of North Carolina's education landscape, access research-based strategies and data-informed insights, and build lasting coalitions across K–12, higher education, nonprofit, and government sectors, all united in advancing access, opportunity, and transformation across the state.
