

The Transformation

Philippians 1:9-11

“The growing-point for the Christian, as Paul discerns it, is _____, a seed from which he anticipates vigorous growth as it abounds _____ and _____. Its upthrusting shoots are received and held by two stakes, _____ and _____, and under their control begin to put forth leaves and blossoms: first the distinctive life-style of the Christian as we _____ what is _____ and then, at the very heart of this life-style, the fair blossom of holiness in both the inner person (_____) and the outer behaviour (_____). Finally there is the perfected _____, a _____ adequate even for the great Day itself.” - Alec Moyter
