The wind calls the leaves, "Come out and play,"
 In dresses of red and gold, they sway.
 The summer is gone, and the days turn cold,
 As they dance and fly, a story to be told.
 They say goodbye to the world, a joyful sound,
 And flutter down to sleep upon the ground.
 A blanket of snow will cover their bed,
But they leave a promise of what's ahead.
