

Harold W. Andersen,

A Distinguished Fellow

Andy Andersen (right) and Ron Klataske at Andy's Triple Creek Farm and Lodge in Missouri, April 2013

The greatest people we have known do not lead and aspire for personal rewards. They think in terms of what they can do and how they can help others. In Andy Andersen's case, his devotion has included conservation, instilling outdoor enjoyment and the profession of journalism. He also has a natural propensity of bringing people together in friendship. His leadership exemplifies a quotation attributed to Walt Whitman:

"When I give, I give myself."

A general overview of Andy's impressive contributions to a broad spectrum of interests to the Nebraska Game and Parks Foundation and the agency were included in text of a Distinguished Fellow Award presented to Andy in July, a few days before his 90th birthday. The list is just the tip of the iceberg of Andy's contributions and leadership for conservation alone. He served on the Midwest Advisory Committee for the National Park Service many years ago, contributed generously to Ducks Unlimited, National Audubon and Audubon Nebraska, the Nebraska Land Trust, and The Nature Conservancy, which relied on his guidance for establishment of a state chapter in Nebraska.

With a three-year challenge gift and fundraising outreach he also made it possible for Audubon of Kansas to emerge from a largely unfunded startup to an effective conservation force. With AOK's acceptance of the gift of 5,000 acres from the estate of Harold and Lucille Hutton that became the Hutton Niobrara Ranch Wildlife Sanctuary in 2002, AOK has relied on the sage advice of Andy (and fellow Nebraska leader Charles Wright of Lincoln) to make the property an outstanding demonstration of stewardship.

We have been honored to have Andy Andersen on the Audubon of Kansas Board of Trustees. Our board consists of individuals who have excelled in their professions and personal lives. Andersen Hall, which houses the College of Journalism and Mass Communications at UNL, is named after Harold and Marian Andersen. The inspirational leadership of this couple is without parallel in Nebraska. Harold Andersen has spent his life in an unrelenting quest to see a free press established globally and has affected political and governmental decision-making worldwide. He was the first American to serve as president of the International Federation of Newspaper Publishers.

As a way of being more closely involved in activities with their teenage son, David, Andy followed the advice of a friend and began with an extended canoe trip on the Dismal River. Hunting became a joint passion and continues. I have been honored to host Andy, David and other friends for nearly-annual Spring Turkey hunting in Kansas, and join them on other occasions at Andersen's farm devoted to conservation and hunting and fishing in Missouri. For many of our nation's first generations of conservationists, hunting has been a springboard for conservation. And as we have previously highlighted in PRAIRIE WINGS, conservation and camaraderie are complementary companions.
