

WHO WILL SIT ON THE DAIS THIS WEEK?

For more than $3 million a year, Patterson residents are getting a revolving door of legal representation. City Attorney Nubia Goldstein has been MIA since July. In her absence, fellow White Brenner attorneys Thomas Remlinger and Christina Pritchard fill in at City Council meetings, as does Deputy City Attorney Doug White ... when he's not jetting back and forth from his family residence in Spain.

One attorney is absent. Another lives part-time on another continent. And the whole firm faces conflict-of-interest concerns because of its work for the American Chemistry Council—a powerful chemical trade association that has opposed stronger limits on chromium-6 in drinking water.

Yet Patterson taxpayers are still footing the bill for millions in legal fees each year.

Patterson deserves consistent legal representation, not a revolving door on the dais.
