Byron Writers Festival '26

This year, Byron Writers Festival returns to Byron Bay on the land and waterways of the Bundjalung nation. With a new precinct in the heart of town, the 2026 festival is both a reinvention and homecoming — an offer of sanctuary in a tumultuous world.

Over three days, we will gather with many of the finest Australian and international writers whose insight and originality will illuminate the possibilities and purpose of literature. From new ways of understanding the past, present and future, to exploring expectations of form and language, the writers of Byron Writers Festival '26 bring wisdom, joy, irreverence, and indefatigable curiosity to the most easterly point of mainland Australia.

We present this festival at a moment of great global change, in times that are increasingly chaotic, dark and absurd, as algorithmic tools offer a cheap illusion of creativity and understanding. From the festival stage to the bookstore and the cafes, take sanctuary here alongside those nourished by the doing of writing, reading and thinking.

Dreamers made Byron Bay. They were artists, surfers and activists who imagined something different. Byron Writers Festival was born of this place. With our new precinct and more free programming than ever before, we are bringing culture into the community and creating new rituals of shared connection.

Discover the best in literature from around the country, with international guests from Aotearoa, Chile, India, Singapore and the USA, and engage in uplifting conversations on literary craft, philosophy, politics, climate, love, and family. You will engage with ideas that we need in order to strengthen democracy, and make a material difference to the lives of all in a society.

In uncertain times, these conversations offer the antidote to despair. Here, we are free to think and demand the impossible.

Stories that Shape Our Future

What does a better tomorrow look like? For three decades, Southern Cross University has partnered with Byron Writers Festival to explore this question – bringing bold ideas and important conversations to the stage.

As the festival has grown into a leading regional event, its connection to community has remained at its core, bringing people together to explore the issues shaping our future. Together, we've created space for researchers, writers and thinkers to challenge perspectives, spark curiosity and explore solutions to the complex issues influencing our world.

Championing disruptive ideas, creative solutions and local action with global impact is why Southern Cross University remains proud to be a founding partner. We're excited to return in 2026, continuing to support the festival and invest in the next generation of storytellers through the Student Writing Prize and Future Writers Festival.

Congratulations to the Byron Writers Festival team on 30 remarkable years, and here's to the stories that are yet to be told.

MARKED EARTH
I was here.

'A ceramic object is, perhaps, one of the simplest ways a human being can say: I was here.'

BLACK FIG GALLERY

Like a well-loved book that you feel something new from with each read. Art is much the same; every time you look a little closer, you discover something new.

Exhibition Runs: August 20 - 30 2026
Opening Event: Thursday 20 | 5 - 7.30pm

In partnership with the Mud Trail, Black Fig Gallery has a first in Gallery exhibition - 'MARKED EARTH'. Clay has long carried the marks of people, place and time. From ancient vessels to contemporary sculpture, ceramic objects become records of the moment in which they were made. Political tensions, environmental concerns, humour, ritual, identity and process all leave their remains within the surface. These works act as contemporary artefacts - traces of the present moment embedded within fired earth.
