

Three Take-Aways

- 1) Amid the absence of NFP print, ISM services index warn of weaker demand.
- 2) Ms. Takaichi won the LDP leadership election and this has set back the JPY as she was viewed as favouring looser monetary and fiscal policy stance.
- 3) Vietnam GDP growth to remain robust as both manufacturing activity and services indicators hold firm.

MACRO THEME: Leadership and Layoffs

- Last Friday, markets had to contend with the absence of NFP report as US equities turned in a mixed performance while UST yields climbed higher. Dallas Fed President Lorie Logan stated that inflation is furthest away from target and there is a need to be cautious from here. Even Stephen Miran had caveats last Friday, he said that if there are shocks to rent, he would adjust his benign inflation forecast.
- On the data front, while US NFP data may be missing last Friday, markets still had to digest the dismal ISM Services Index which printed at the 50 mark, threatening to dip into contractionary territory. The decline of ISM services index was largely driven by sharp drop in new orders sub-index from 54.0 to 50.4. The employment sub-index rose but remain entrenched in contraction.
- Shutdown drama continues as Democrats and Republicans continued to play the political blame game. It is said that the Trump administration is delaying layoff plans till Monday as they await another Senate vote tonight.
- Meanwhile in Japan, Ms. Takaichi has won the LDP's leadership race and may be set to become Japan's first Prime Minister during a mid-October vote.
- Her victory over the weekend though has set back the JPY which has seen the USD/JPY jumped to above 149 with markets viewing her stance as favouring looser monetary and fiscal policy. She has been seen as a protege of Shinzo Abe famed for his Abenomics. Nonetheless, while there will be fears at the ultra long end JGBs, caution from the MOF may provide some restrain.
- OPEC+ was also cautious as they agree to a more modest 137k barrels a day ramp up in oil supply in order to advert any potential for a sharp collapse in oil prices in their attempt to regain market share. This smaller than expected increase in supply has allowed a slightly uptick in Brent crude prices to above US$65/barrel.
- In EM-Asia FX today, higher UST yields will be a setback but the focus remains on the BoT and BSP decisions later this week.

Yields (2Y: +3.7bp; 10Y: +3.6bp; 30Y: +2.3bp)

- UST yields rose across the curve.

Equities (Nasdaq: -0.3%; S&P 500: +0.0%; Dow: +0.5%)

- US equities climbed higher across the board.

FX (DXY: -0.1%)

- JPY has seen the largest slippage amid Takaichi's victory over the weekend. That said, most G10 peers were little changed against the Greenback last friday.
- This morning, dragged by the JPY weakness, USD/SGD has crept up to above 1.29 and EUR softer towards 1.17. AUD slipped to just below 66 cents.

China: Subdued Credit Growth

- Credit growth likely remains subdued. New loan increases are likely to stay weak, as local governments continue to use proceeds from special refinancing bonds to repay hidden debt, albeit at a slower pace in September.
- By the end of September, total issuance of these bonds had reached RMB1.99trn, or 99.3% of the full-year quota, up from 97% in August. We also expect a broad-based moderation in M2 and total social financing growth due to high base effects. Notably, last year's government bond issuance was back-loaded, with a sharp acceleration only beginning in August

Vietnam: Economic Expansion Sustained

- For Vietnam's upcoming GDP print, we project a strong print as economic activity from both services and manufacturing remains robust. Specifically, we expect growth to come in at around 7.3% YoY with balance of risks being tilted to the upside.
- First, manufacturing sector output has continued robust expansion in Q2 with broad based increases across almost all sectors in August despite on-going tariff developments.
- Second, services sector is also buoyed by both financial and tourism activity. Average visitor arrivals expanding 4.8% MoM over July-Aug relative to Q2.
- Vietnam's tourism sector has benefited from a surge in tourists from China which accounts for almost half the increase, which is a stark contrast from the missing Chinese tourist in Thailand.
- Furthermore, amid a surge in trading volume in equities in July and August, financial sector value-add is also likely to have risen.
- Lastly, exports revenue have also stayed firm growing by 15.3% YoY over July and August on the back of strong demand for computers and electronics products and parts.
- On balance, for growth, Q3 GDP will hog the limelight for its outperformance among regional peers. That said, it has been well noted that this may have come at the expense of the VND which is down 3.5% YTD which assisted to weather some external headwinds.
- As for the inflation, weather related supply disruptions may imply a further spike in headline CPI while prices tourism related categories may instead see a robust but not necessarily accelerating pace as some demand may level on these adverse events.
