

USD Buoyancy: The Pay America Proposition

"Crime is common. Logic is rare. Therefore, it is upon the logic rather than upon the crime that you should dwell." – Sherlock Holmes

In a Nutshell:

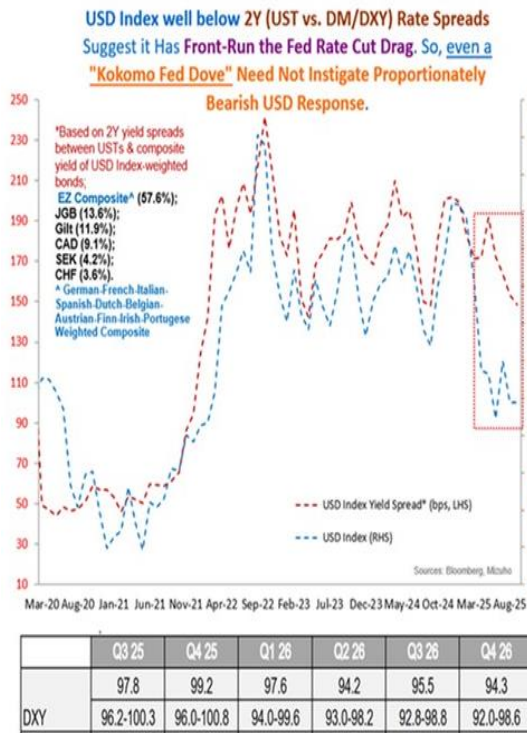

- Admittedly, prospects of potentially irredeemable loss of trust in USD (as the global reserve currency) underpinning "Sell America" amplifies longer-run risks to USD.
- But forced transfers, bordering on confiscation, of private sector/trade partner resources by the US, entailed in "Pay America", are set to be more imminently, and meaningfully accretive to the USD.
- So, despite criminally structural foot-shooting priming the USD for longer-run erosion "Pay America" logic suggests that the Greenback averts an imminent crash. In fact, USD is set to benefit from a controlled softening. More so against AxJ.

- No doubt, "Sell America" is a structural feature of the prevailing geoeconomic realities that will erode the USD over time.
- But equally, the USD is not set for an imminent collapse either. Especially as countervailing forces may be chronically under-estimated.
- In fact, to the contrary, the "Pay(-to-Play)" America proposition we identified earlier^ (recapped below) suggests unexpected USD buoyancy instead – possibly even through dovish Fed surprises.

- To be sure, “Sell America” is likely to be a durable, longer-burn “balance sheet risk”. But arguably only expressed intermittently rather than unremittingly for now.
- Whereas “Pay America” is the intervening cashflow impact that could assert itself more emphatically and imminently.
- Point being, the imposed “Pay(-to-Play) America” extraction demanded of trade/security partners, may dominate with USD-supportive flow impact via;
 - Current Account (C/A) transfers, led by the purchase of US farm goods, aircraft/defense purchases, capital/tech goods and energy (as agreed in negotiations with the US) coupled with;
 - Capital appropriations, be it in the form of capex commitments and/or investment funding (into the US) demanded.
- Especially as the deals, agreement frameworks and talks quantified thus far suggest sizable “Pay America” cash flows set to be accretive for the USD, all else being equal.
- Admittedly, the immediate impact of “Pay America” may be inflated by pre-existing commitments and longer drawdown/realization horizons as far out as a decade (especially for aircraft, defense, capex and funds).
- But the indisputable fact remains that even after discounting for these, “Pay America” flows are likely to move the needle considerably towards diminishing C/A and fiscal deficits, thereby propping up the USD.
- Upshot being, the cashflow backstop, if not boost, for the USD could surprise. In turn, significantly dulling and deferring the balance sheet case for serious USD erosion.
- Accordingly, we reiterate our longstanding view of USD softening in a controlled fashion, not slumping precipitously into 2026, despite our view of a more dovish Fed.
- Notably, disproportionately outsized share of “Pay America” commitments for Asia underpins our view of relative AxJ under-performance.
- Against a backdrop of softer USD into 2026, this is likely to entail far more subdued AxJ gains vis-à-vis corresponding DXY pullback.

* Note that it is not necessary to eliminate US deficits. Merely diminishing deficits 0.5-1.0%pt could have surprisingly large positive effects on the USD.

And Asia's (ASEAN+Korea+Japan) Share is Sizable, Suggesting Scope for Underperformance in Asia FX/AxJ.

Annex

^“Pay-to-Pay” US Extortion & Attendant Risks, 11 August

In a Nutshell:

- The widening “pay-to-play” imposition of US trade/tariff policies suggests a heavier toll extracted on US trade partners and the private sector at large.
 - Nvidia and AMD having to pay 15% of revenues to the US on exports of chips to China is the latest, but perhaps not the last, iteration of “play to play” US extortion.
 - As discussed before, this extraction via imposed US imports and/or investments (into the US) will hit as compromised Current Accounts and increased fiscal burden elsewhere.
 - In addition, it will inevitably entail some combination of profit margins and household income/savings confiscated by the US government.
 - The imposition of export levies on chips (to China) threaten to intensify industrial deflationary pressures for China, in turn raising the bar for Beijing’s anti-involution measures to snap deflation.
 - To the extent that Chinese producers export higher costs, stagflation-type dilemma will mount elsewhere as higher prices collide with negative demand pressures.
 - Why USD May Not Crash Imminently: Perversely, “Pay (to Play) America” offsetting “Sell America” could in fact backstop USD decline for now (at notable risk of CNH pressures and AXJ downside), although longer-term USD standing is harmed by eroded trust.
- The “pay-to-play” US trade extortion continues to widen. And brazenly so, as it takes on an extraterritorial dimension.
 - In its latest iteration, which is tragically not likely to be the last, chipmakers Nvidia and AMD are to pay (to the US government) 15% of revenues from chips sales to China. This effective export levy is so as to secure requisite export licenses.
 - In a note* from July, we characterized the lop-sided and disadvantageous trade deals with the US as effectively being “pay-to-play” US trade policies being forced on the world at pain of (even more) debilitating tariffs.
 - Specifically, as it pertained to “... highly extractive US(-imposed) trade deals the require trade partners literally pay for the benefit of US trade ... by way of guaranteed US imports (energy, farm, aircraft, etc.) and/or investments.”
 - And as surmised then, “the resulting conspiracy of tariffs and “pay-to-play” extractive trade deals will almost certainly impose cost (to trade partners) via compromised Current Accounts and/or increased fiscal burden ...”

- This continues to remain the case. Fact is, US tariffs/levies/impositions are ultimately transfers to the US government at the expense of producers (profits), consumers (household income/savings) and other governments (fiscal resources).
- In addition, “pay-to-play” US trade policies making landfall elsewhere as higher costs, as is the case with chips to China, will inevitably accentuate deflation risks in China and stagflation-type of dilemma elsewhere.
- Specifically, if Chinese firms are forced to eat into already distressed margins amid competition and additional costs (e.g. 15% chips surcharge) passed on, it could exacerbate China’s already problematically entrenched industrial deflationary pressures.
- This will heighten the challenge for Beijing to successfully implement its “anti-involution” policies aimed at snapping widening/entrenching deflation risks.
- And to the extent that China may be able to export higher costs, the resultant inflation will land elsewhere, inconveniently showing up as stagflation-type dilemma amid coincident negative demand pressures.
- Why USD May Not Crash Imminently: Perversely, such forced transfer, or confiscation, of private sector/trading partner resources is one reason why the Greenback may not crash imminently. Especially as “Sell America” is checked by “Pay(to Play) America”.
- But Risks USD May Not Crash Imminently: Although inevitable, possibly irredeemable, loss of trust enlarges risks to USD and its standing (as the global reserve currency) in the longer-run.
- Watch CNH & Attendant AXJ Risks: Mounting pressures on China, regardless of signs of reciprocal tariff risks being assuaged, could dampen CNH and increase downside risks. Accordingly, AXJ will be vulnerable to bouts of further “Pay (to Play) America” risks.
