Three Take-Aways

1) US NFP print outperformed to send UST yields higher but weaker labour participation and earnings growth dampened buoyant job market narrative.

2) With continued attack on oil and gas infrastructure in the Middle East, OPEC+ hike remains symbolic with Brent crude buoyed above US$110.

3) EM-Asia FX to remain under stress for the week as energy shortage continue to bite and cost of living measures dent fiscal consolidation.

MACRO THEME: Rebound, Not Relief?

- Last Friday, US NFP print came in better than expected at 178k jobs added which aided a climb in UST yields in a holiday shortened trading session.

- The higher employment came on the back of a 90k rebound in healthcare and social sector jobs as an agreement was reached between Kaiser Permanente and unions to resolve a strike and the effect of a harsh winter in February faded.

- Meanwhile, it is worth noting that the slightly lower unemployment rate declined to 4.3% was in part due to lower participation rates and has been falling since November 2025. Discouraged worker effects may soon begin to weigh on those keeping an eye on labour markets. Even with a reduced workforce, weaker hourly earnings growth also signals that there may not be much of an employee's market in the US.

- Nonetheless, this jobs report provided optimism for Fed's Daly who said that it was good news and very welcome as it allows monetary policy to balance their inflation and growth risks. To be clear, she said that monetary policy is in a good place to do that right now where it sits. Crucially, she also noted that the economy does not need to create as many jobs, choosing to focus on unemployment rate as she characterise the labour market as being "slow to no growth".

Rescue, Not Resolution

- Over the weekend, while the US managed to rescue their airman from Iran after their fighter jet was shot down, US President Trump has renewed threats to destroy Iran's power plants.

- That said, he will be holding a news conference tonight (April 6th, 1pm Eastern time) and also posted 8pm Tuesday Eastern Time deadline on his Truth Social. This may be in reference to his ultimatum of 48 hours for Iran to make a deal with his envoys reportedly in deep negotiations.

- Meanwhile, Oman and Iran are said to be discussing options for smooth flow of transit through Strait of Hormuz with Iraq being clear to use after they were declared a 'brotherly country'. Notably, French owned container ship CMA CGM Kribi managed to pass through Hormuz on Friday. It represents a glimmer of hope for Europe but not a resolution to near term fuel woes which has seen Italy restrict jet fuel supplies at some of their airports.

Impaired Capacity and Energy Price Surge

- OPEC+ undertook a symbolic hike in output agreeing to raise targets by 206k barrels a day in May. While the desire to increase output is evident with Brent crude prices above US$110/barrel, their statement noted that "restoring damaged energy assets to full capacity is both costly and takes a long time, thereby affecting overall supply availability."

- Over the weekend, Iranian strikes continue to damage energy facilities in the Middle East with Kuwait's refining and petroleum plant suffering significant damage.

- The UAE also saw fires at their petrolchemical plant after debris from intercepted drone caused fires leading to production halt.

- In Asia, fuel concerns remain top of mind with Japan PM Takaichi stating this morning that they are coordinating with Iran on safety of vessels while not ruling out any measures on securing essential supplies.

- CPI prints in Thailand, Taiwan and Philippines are likely to surge and reflect the energy price shock.

Vietnam: Robust Activity, Oil Shock Features

- Released over the weekend, Q1 GDP growth in Vietnam outperformed consensus expectations, expanding 7.8% YoY with both manufacturing and services sector.

- Healthy industrial production growth (6.9%) in March with computer, electronic and optical products output rebounding 14.3% MoM from the February slack due to festivities allay fears of an electronics slowdown. Notably, there appears to be a sharper rebound in extraction of crude petroleum and gas which may reflecting energy needs as impact of the Middle East conflict spillovers.

- The oil shock's impact on the CPI print is certainly undoubted with headline CPI hitting 4.6% YoY (1.2% MoM) in March, exceeding the SBV's target of 4.5%. Higher transport costs contributed the entirety of the MoM increase with the diesel price index up 57% MoM. Higher jet fuel costs also saw flight prices up 23% YoY. To be clear, most other categories in the CPI basket such as household appliances and information and communication also saw increases while softer prices was mainly due to weaker post Tet demand.

- The trade balance in March reflected both the electronics cycle and energy shock with electronics and computers exports accelerating to 51.9% YoY while crude oil and petroleum exports contracted 55.7% and 92.3%. Imports of petroleum products rose 165.8% YoY underscoring the acute energy needs.

- Looking ahead, the SBV remains unlikely to take policy action solely on CPI exceeding their target and the VND's performance amid real rate compression and continued energy strains on FX reserves will be closely watched.
