Three Take-Aways

- 1) Latest Iran proposal reveals the deep divide between the two parties, with limited progress toward de-escalation.
- 2) China's inflation prints surprised to the upside, driven by upstream pressures, which has trimmed the room for broad-based easing this year, with only a 10bp rate cut now penciled in Q4.
- 3) Front-end HIBOR is likely to remain on an upward trajectory in the near term, supported by seasonal dividend demand and resilient domestic activity.

MACRO THEME: Deep Divide Persists

- US Treasuries bear-flattened overnight as geopolitical tensions between the US and Iran remained unresolved.
- President Trump stated that the ceasefire was on "massive life support" after dismissing Tehran's latest peace proposal.
- The deep divide persists in their negotiations, with limited progress toward de-escalation.
- On the one hand, Iran is reportedly seeking the removal of US naval blockades and sanctions relief while retaining influence over traffic through the Strait of Hormuz.
- On the other hand, Trump sharply criticized the proposal, calling it "totally unacceptable" and "a piece of garbage."
- That said, while the rhetoric remains tense, Trump stopped short of threatening an immediate resumption of military strikes. Instead, he signaled that Washington could revisit plans to escort commercial vessels through the Strait of Hormuz.
- As a result, the market reaction in oil remained relatively contained, with Brent crude prices still trading below USD105/bbl.
- Despite the deterioration in US-Iran dialogue, broader financial markets have remained notably resilient.
- US equity indices closed higher overnight, while major Asian markets, including Japan, Korea, Hong Kong, China, and Taiwan, all ended Monday in positive territory, partly supported by continued AI optimism. Notably, South Korea's KOSPI surged 4.32%, extending its year-on-year gains to more than 200%.

China: Upstream Inflation Pressures

- China's CPI and PPI both rose faster than expected. The PPI, in particular, increased by 2.8% YoY and 1.7% MoM in April, marking the strongest sequential gain since 2021.
- This surge was largely driven by higher mining and raw-material prices, while inflation in the manufacturing sector remained relatively mild (1.5% YoY; 0.4% MoM).
- CPI inflation edged up to 1.2% YoY, led by rising oil prices, which contributed 0.56ppt to headline growth. In contrast, food prices fell 1.6% after a brief increase in February and March, subtracting 0.28ppt.

- Core inflation, excluding food and energy, also registered at 1.2% YoY in April, slightly up from 1.1% in March.
- Given firmer inflation prints in both PPI and CPI, as well as the stalemate in US-Iran talks, we see reduced scope for broad-based monetary easing this year, with the PBoC shifting toward more calibrated support.
- Relative to our earlier expectation of two rate cuts, we now forecast one 10bp policy rate cut in 4Q26.

China: Solid Trade Momentum

- China's April trade data also surprised on the upside.
- Exports rose 14.1% YoY in April, rebounding sharply from 2.5% in March, consistent with resilient growth in exports from Korea and Vietnam.
- Growth was driven by AI- and clean-energy-related products, with strong performances in electronic ICs (+100% YoY), automatic data-processing equipment and parts (+47%), and automobiles (+44%).
- By destination, exports to ASEAN and the EU remained robust, while shipments to the US rose 11% YoY, the fastest pace since 2024, partly reflecting a favourable base effect.
- Crude oil imports fell 20% YoY in volume amid supply disruptions from the Strait of Hormuz, leaving China's exports of refined petroleum declining 7.5% YoY.
- That said, exports of oil-related products such as fertilizers (+46%) and plastic articles (+8%) remained relatively resilient, and aluminium exports jumped 31% YoY due to suspended Middle East supply.
- Imports rose a solid 25.3% YoY in April, driven mainly by processing and entrepôt trade, pointing to stronger reexport activity rather than a pickup in domestic demand.

HK: Front-End HIBOR Turns the Corner

- Front-end HIBOR has reversed its year-to-date downtrend, with 1M and 3M fixings rising to their highest levels since February.
- The move reflects firmer HKD funding conditions, supported by sustained equity-related demand, seasonal dividend flows, and stronger HKD loan demand amid improving economic growth.
- The rise in front-end rates has been accompanied by a flattening of the overall curve.
- The HIBOR-SOFR differential remained negative but has moved back toward a more normal historical range.
- Looking ahead, the uptrend in front-end rates should persist in the near term, underpinned by continued cash demand through the peak dividend period and resilient domestic activity. Seasonal half-year settlement demand in June should further sustain tighter liquidity conditions and reinforce the recent uptrend.
- We expect firmer HIBOR to support the HKD, with USD/HKD gradually returning toward 7.81 by end-June.
