

Chyrpe is where Female-Led Relationships Finally Get Their Own Space

London, UK - January, 2025

Chyrpe, the first dating app built specifically for female-led relationships, launched in May 2024 and has already grown to nearly a million downloads. It is redefining modern dating by giving women the tools to lead connections on their own terms. Created for people seeking either female-led or femdom dynamics, the platform pairs strict user verification with unmatched control features to offer a safe, intentional environment.

Key points

- Chyrpe supports both female-led relationships and femdom, recognizing that one guides daily structure while the other shapes erotic expression, and giving users the freedom to explore either or both without judgement.
- Every user must complete verification before interacting, ensuring a trusted, bot-free space where matches begin with confidence.
- The Powerboard allows women to shape their entire experience, setting conversational boundaries, blocking explicit messages by default, controlling access, and creating custom rules.

Full user verification

Chyrpe, launched in May 2024, has rapidly grown into one of the most talked-about new dating platforms, approaching a million downloads across both major app stores. Its success comes from offering something the mainstream market has long overlooked: A platform built specifically for female-led and femdom relationships. Instead of pushing users into generic matching formulas, Chyrpe builds connections around female-led and femdom relationships.

To create a space that feels safe and intentional, Chyrpe requires full verification for every single user before they can interact on the app. No bots, no anonymous lurkers, no guessing who you're talking to. This extra step has become one of the community's biggest strengths, allowing matches to form in an environment built on trust rather than uncertainty.

What's the difference between female-led relationships and femdom?

Chyrpe's most defining feature, the Powerboard, gives women full control over their experience. It goes far beyond profile settings: it lets women decide how conversations unfold, what topics are off limits, how they want to be addressed, and what type of messages they're willing to receive. By default, all explicit or kinky content is blocked unless a woman chooses to allow it. She can restrict access to her profile, prevent short or low-effort messages, mute men entirely, or introduce custom rules that shape the dynamic in creative, personal ways. The Powerboard is the first feature of its kind on any dating app, designed to place agency fully in the hands of women and to center the female gaze rather than expecting users to conform to male-driven norms.

This approach reflects the philosophy running through the entire platform. Chyrpe recognizes that female-led relationships and femdom share a focus on women guiding the dynamic, but they serve different roles: one shapes everyday relationship structure and communication, while the other shapes erotic expression and kink. Many couples blend them, some choose one over the other, and Chyrpe supports the full spectrum without judgement or pressure.
