This does not include malocclusion (imperfect alignment when jaws are closed) and hip dysplasia (caused by potential environmental issues – i.e. over-exercise, prolonged jogging, etc. – while dog is in adolescence). The purchaser of this puppy must take this puppy to the veterinarian of their choosing within one week of taking possession of this puppy in order to satisfy this guarantee.

If a congenital, hereditary or genetic health condition is detected by the purchaser’s veterinarian within one year from this puppy’s birth the condition must be documented by the veterinarian and then must be corroborated by the seller’s veterinarian (listed above). In the event that there is a hereditary, congenital or genetic health condition – excluding malocclusion and hip dysplasia – affecting this puppy, within two years of the purchase of this puppy, the vet costs (up to the purchase price of this puppy) will be paid upon receipt of the veterinary invoice once the conditions are met.
