Course Description

This high school U.S. History course provides a chronological study of American history from early exploration to the modern era using the Notgrass curriculum. Students examine major historical events, figures, and movements while developing an understanding of political, economic, geographic, and cultural influences on the United States.

The course emphasizes reading comprehension, written responses, primary source analysis, map work, and critical thinking. Students complete regular lessons, reviews, and projects that reinforce historical knowledge and encourage independent learning.
