Background

The Indigenous Literacy Foundation (ILF) is a national Community-led organisation working to ensure equity of access to literacy materials in remote Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities across Australia.

The organisation's targeted investments deliver culturally relevant books and resources and supports Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people living in remote Communities to create and publish stories in the languages of their choice. This work has been globally recognised through the announcement of the ILF as the 2024 Astrid Lindgren Memorial Laureate.

The ILF aims to provide equity of opportunity for all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children, ensuring they have future choice in education, health and general wellbeing. ILF works to:

- Consistently build strong, ongoing relationships with local Community organisations.
- Empower local Communities to be their children's First Teachers.
- Collaborate with remote Communities to invest in their language work, through celebrating their cultures and publishing books in their languages.
- Foster partnerships and work with publishers, booksellers, authors as well as our Ambassadors to nurture young Indigenous writers and illustrators aspirations.
- Collaborate with the Australian Book Industry to provide the best possible literacy resources at cost-effective prices.
- Advocate to and engage with the broader Australian community regarding the importance of Indigenous stories, cultures, languages and literacy.

As Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders, culture is at the heart of everything we do and who we are. Literacy is fundamental and core to accessing and unlocking all aspects of our lives, health, education, justice, society. Literacy must always be embedded in culture. This is the key to realising true self-determination and a future where aspirations and opportunities are not just words, but a reality.

Value Proposition

ILF is a trusted partner with a proven track record focused on deep and respectful relationships within Communities. From our initial start as the Indigenous Literacy Project, the ILF will be celebrating 20 years of success in 2027. Our long-term partnership with the Book Industry means that ILF's impact is multi-generational, creating pathways and broader social outcomes through the power of literacy. Through a strengths-based approach, ILF is committed to investing in long-term employment in remote Communities and is focused on the positive, building trust through consistency and presence.

ILF's evidence-based programs capture the multi-generational impact that influences broader social outcomes, with a focus on First Nations Languages, literacy, and knowledge systems. Programs like Book Supply create an exclusive selection of culturally relevant books, engaging entire Communities in fulfilling their aspirations around literacy.

ILF's critical operation of creating physical products in First Languages centres the two-way definition of Indigenous Literacy as positive and celebrates the rich diversity of Communities, culture, languages, Country, and people.

ILF's Community-led approach is reflected in policies ensuring independent, ethical, and sustainable funding unencumbered by changes in government policy.

We invest time to build deep relationships with Communities, the Book Industry, donors, and other key stakeholders, ensuring reliable and sustainable growth of ILF operations in Australia and the global market.

We believe that literacy skills are the entry point to education, health, culture, and Country. With a commitment to the rights of self-determination and freedom of Community, ILF is driven by First Nations peoples for First Nations peoples.

VALUES

Our focus is on building and maintaining relationships with remote Communities.

Our Foundations' values are:

DIVERSITY: We respect diversity in all forms and the views and contributions of others.

RESPECT: We acknowledge a strengths-based approach and understand everyone brings experience and skills to the organisation. We value these differences and treat all people with dignity and value the collective power of teamwork.

TRUST: As a Community-led organisation, we listen and platform the voices of the Communities we collaborate with.

EQUITY: We collaborate with and work for the Communities at their request and as they wish. We treat people fairly.

PURPOSE

Our purpose is to invest in remote Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities to provide the tools and resources they request to shape the direction of their children's literacy futures.

Through collaborative investment in Community and meaningful strategic partnerships, the ILF supports sustainable and positive change in Indigenous literacy through the supply of books and a focus on the publication of Indigenous content.

We aim to advocate and build awareness among the wider Australian population of the strengths, knowledges and wisdoms held within remote Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities.

BOOK BUZZ

Supporting Early Literacy

Our Book Buzz program aims to develop familiarity and engagement with books for children under 5 through daily dedicated Story Time sessions, so children can develop critical pre-literacy skills. Our team also provides the funding for many remote Communities to translate popular books into First Languages, allowing children to start their literacy journey with books in languages spoken in their homes.

Book Buzz supports remote playgroups and collaborates with organisations such as Families as First Teachers (FaFT) in the Northern Territory and KindiLink in Western Australia. The program provides board books, picture books, and touch and feel books and others printed in a First Language. Book Buzz also provides learning kits with additional resources such as puppets and puzzles to support early literacy development.

Through the Book Buzz program, children learn to navigate books; how to hold them, how to move from the start to the end following the story, and to think about what might happen next. It is a vital learning stage in preparing children for school.

BOOK SUPPLY

Providing culturally relevant books

Increasing access to books starts at a Community level with Book Supply.

Access to books in remote Communities is challenging, as there are often no libraries or bookstores. ILF's Book Supply program provides new, culturally relevant books to remote Communities across Australia. Schools, Community health and women's centres working in remote Communities, can also order books to distribute to children and families.

Book packs are carefully selected for different age groups:

- TODDLERS 0-3
- KIDS 4-7
- BIG KIDS 8-12
- COMMUNITY 13+

Over 50% of books in the packs feature Indigenous authors and illustrators. This is important as it allows kids to see themselves and their culture reflected in the stories, helping to build a sense of connection, belonging and pride. Book Supply is distributed biannually, through our partnership with Australia Post, ensuring Communities secure access to resources at the most appropriate times. Distributing over 150,000 books to over 500 Communities per year makes Book Supply the largest curated list targeted to the specific needs of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities.

TALENT PATHWAYS

Building pathways to Careers

ILF's inaugural Talent Pathways program is designed to support participants build on their existing skills, enabling them to build a portfolio of work so that they can commence their own creative business operating from their Home Community.

It is hoped that they will be able to work with the ILF and a range of corporates around Australia who are in need of these unique skills.

CREATE

Mentoring young adults in writing and illustrating

Key creative programs like the Pamela Lofts Bequest and the Create Initiative support Community members to write, edit, illustrate and gain confidence in their work.

The Create program supports students and adults to come together to write, illustrate and publish a book in one week with the support of ILF Ambassadors and a Publishing Partner. These participants, who are often students, learn valuable writing and illustrating skills. Most importantly they walk away with a sense of pride and confidence in their unique abilities.

The Pamela Lofts Bequest program supports young adults from remote Communities in the Northern Territory and Western Australia through digital literacy and illustration workshops. The workshops provide valuable skills through the partnership of aligned organisations such as Adobe Australia, University of Technology, and DXC Technology.

COMMUNITY PUBLISHING

Community Publishing & Translations

Our Community Publishing supports Communities to write and illustrate their own stories in languages of their choice. These stories are created by adults and children in a Community and published by our Foundation. The books are then gifted back to the Community to share with children and families. These books are highly desired because they often share a local story that a Community is familiar with and in a language they speak at home. To date, our Foundation has published 235 books in 45 Indigenous languages and paid over $220,000 in royalties to Community creators should they choose to make books available for sale through bookshops. Books written in language assist in maintaining and preserving these languages for generations to come.

The Translation Project has been a long standing project translating key books selected by Community into First Languages. Books like The Very Hungry Caterpillar, The Very Cranky Bear and Where is the Green Sheep are some of the titles translated into several languages. The ILF will be looking to expand the project to work with more Communities to translate the current set of books and also identify new titles to translate giving the opportunities to more Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children to enjoy books in their First Language.
