

Charm

designed by Gemma Bernal

When Gemma Bernal designed Charm, her vision was a small, inviting seat that exudes a sense of warmth and comfort—like a gentle hug that envelops you. The design ensures that when you rest your arms, you encounter soft, seamless surfaces rather than hard edges. Charm's design is bold and intentional, emphasizing the two distinct yet harmonious components that define it: the backrest, which extends gracefully to the floor, forming the armchair's body, and the seat, which resembles a pouf with its own unique identity. These elements come together seamlessly, creating a clear and cohesive aesthetic. Charm was designed to highlight this "clear delineation between two pieces coming together," referring to this seat and back combining to create the single sculptural piece. The design was carefully created to fit into many applications.

For Gemma Bernal, life is a complex yet beautiful tapestry. Through careful observation, she uncovers its inherent beauty, shape, and structure—ultimately revealing its design and order.

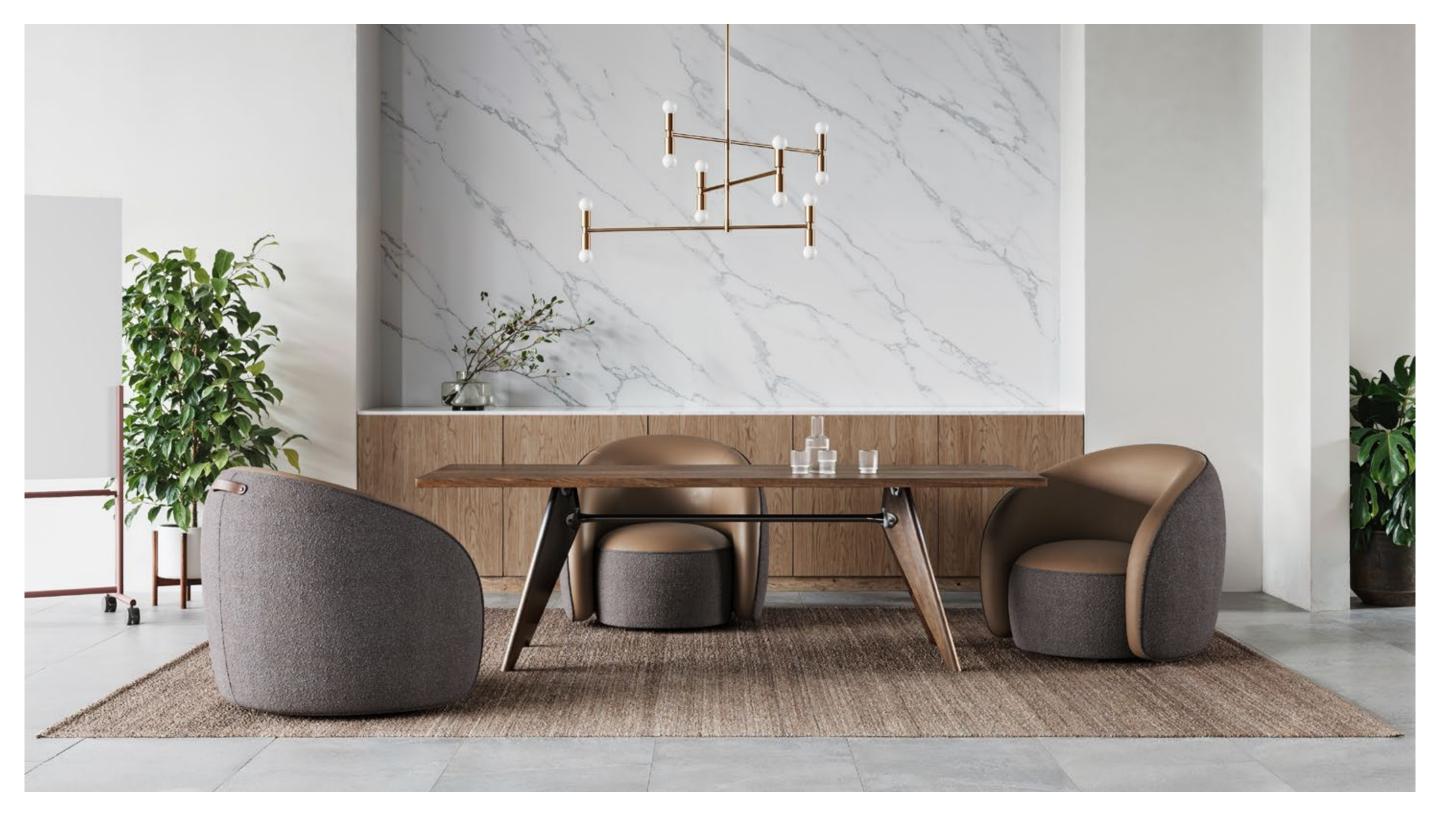

Designed with intention, Charm is a compact, welcoming seat that radiates comfort—offering a sense of ease that gently embraces you.

At the heart of Charm's design is the seamless interaction between two distinct elements: a sculptural backrest that flows effortlessly to the floor, forming the chair's body, and a plush, pouf-inspired seat with its own unique character. These components join with precision, forming a clean, cohesive silhouette.

Soft, curved lines eliminate sharp edges, ensuring that every point of contact— especially where you rest your arms—feels smooth and natural. This thoughtful design delivers both aesthetic harmony and practical comfort.
