Cookies and Tracking Technologies

What are cookies and similar technologies?

A cookie is a small text file placed on your device when you visit a website. Web beacons, pixel tags, and tracking pixels are small invisible images or code that perform similar tracking functions. Session replay tools record user interactions with a website (such as mouse movements, clicks, and scrolling) for analysis. Browser fingerprinting techniques identify devices based on a combination of attributes without using cookies. Collectively, we refer to these as "cookies" throughout this Policy.

Categories of cookies we use

We use the following categories of cookies on our Site:

Strictly Necessary Cookies. These cookies are essential for the Site to function and cannot be switched off. They are usually set in response to actions such as setting privacy preferences, filling in forms, or logging in.

Analytics Cookies. These cookies help us understand how visitors use our Site by collecting aggregated information about traffic, engagement, and behavior. This category includes:

- Website traffic and engagement analytics services, including Google Analytics, that measure Site usage, identify popular content, and analyze visitor behavior. Google Analytics may transfer data to servers in the United States. For more information, see Google's privacy policy at <https://policies.google.com/privacy>. You can opt out of Google Analytics at <https://tools.google.com/dlpage/gaoptout>.
- Session replay and heatmap services that record visitor interactions (such as mouse movements, clicks, and scrolling) to help us identify usability issues and improve our Site. Session replay tools are configured to mask form fields and text inputs to protect sensitive information from being recorded.
- A/B testing and personalization services used to test variations of our content and improve effectiveness.

Advertising and Targeting Cookies. These cookies may be used to build profiles of visitor interests and deliver relevant advertisements on other websites. This category includes:

- Advertising services operated by Google, including Google Ads and YouTube advertising, used to measure advertising performance, build audiences of prior Site visitors, and deliver retargeting advertisements on Google properties and partner sites. For more information, see Google's advertising privacy policy at <https://policies.google.com/technologies/ads>.
- Social media advertising platforms and other advertising services we may use from time to time for similar advertising purposes, including the creation of custom and lookalike audiences.

Functional Cookies. These cookies enable enhanced functionality, such as remembering preferences and settings.

We use a cookie consent management tool that appears when you first visit our Site. Non-essential cookies are blocked by default until you provide consent. You can:
