"We firmly believe that Barchart is the Gold standard for excellence in the highly competitive market data space."

— Vincent Sangiovanni, CEO of Money.net

THE PROBLEM

Money.net wanted to find a single data provider that could fulfill many of their data needs in order to power their investor products. This provider would need to offer a plethora of data in a multitude of formats, allowing Money.net to narrow down their sources of data.

THE SOLUTION

Money.net decided that Barchart would be the best candidate to get the job done. Barchart's suite of connectivity options, including streaming data feeds, flexible APIs, and point-in-time historical data through its Market Replay service, allowed Money.net to consolidate and simplify the connectivity powering their investor products.

"Barchart and Money.net have had a longstanding and rewarding partnership for many years," said Vincent Sangiovanni, CEO of Money.net. "Their data and team make a great working combination to deliver a quality product to both institutional and retail investors. We firmly believe that Barchart is the Gold standard for excellence in the highly competitive market data space."

"Money.net is an industry leader in providing institutional and personal investors with data and tools to research and analyze opportunities in the markets. We're proud to supply Money.net with the data services they need to support their customers," said Barchart CEO Mark Haraburda. "We are committed to working with our clients to ensure they're equipped with all of the tools and data they need to build the absolute best product. We're excited to see our relationship with Money.net continue to grow in the future."

Powered by reliable data from a quality data provider, Money.net will be able to continue to grow and enhance their investor products. To learn more about Money.net please visit www.money.net.
