

How BullBear Powers Their Fantasy Finance Application With Financial Market Data

BullBear is a fantasy finance app in which you can learn to trade and invest with a chance to win prizes. The goal of Anurag Saboo and his team at BullBear is to present the financial markets in a new light to hesitant investors. Bull Bear combines factors of fantasy sports, console gaming and demo poker on a simple platform to encourage engagement and self-learning via non-financial incentives such as league promotions and informational prizes. Anurag, who is the Director of BullBear, says a progressive system of complexity ensures every level of user can benefit from the experience and test their skills in a safe and free environment.

"Barchart's APIs are simple and general data output has been clear, the whole process has been thorough and professional."

THE PROBLEM

With an aim to present relevant financial market data on a simple gaming platform, Anurag and the rest of the team at BullBear needed an optimum amount of end-of-day data for their application that they could display to their own users.

THE SOLUTION

After a long but informational search of exploring different data providers, they found that Barchart was the best fit for BullBear's needs.

"There have been many advantages of working with Barchart," said Anurag. "The sales team was responsive and informative, making it a simple choice. Ultimately, the process was not as exhausting as it could have been. The support team has answered every single query in a prompt manner. Barchart's APIs are simple and general data output has been clear, the whole process has been thorough and professional and we are more than satisfied with it," added Anurag.

With a quality application containing reliable data from Barchart, BullBear is on a successful path for a promising future. "BullBear has various future scenarios but the common theme for them all would be the facilitation of financial knowledge through information and competition. FinTech is an ever-evolving sphere and BullBear aims to continue the disruption of traditional guidance models by encouraging self-learning via readily accessible information," said Anurag.
