The Stillwater Retreat is a three-story coastal farmhouse that redefines living large, with 4,123 heated square feet arranged so there is room for everything and everyone. A twelve-foot ceiling brings drama to the great room, where a gas fireplace inside and a wood-burning fireplace on the covered porch keep evenings going in any season.

The main level pairs a generous owner's suite with a chef's kitchen, double ovens, and dual pantries, plus a first-floor guest suite. Below, a lounge planned for a future bar, two bedroom suites, and a forty-foot lower patio open directly to the pool, while a bonus room engineered for a pool table crowns the home.
