

Even the strongest fortress can be damaged by water

Florida's vast coastline is positioned at or below sea level, which leaves the residents of our state susceptible to flooding events. Most insurance customers surveyed do not realize homeowner insurance policies typically do not provide coverage for a loss caused by a flood.

Statistics show approximately 20% of all flood claims occur in areas designated as low or moderate risk areas, and 90% of all natural disasters in the United States result in flooding. Therefore, it is important to be protected from these common events.

Florida Peninsula has several solutions to help you secure the coverage you need and provide peace of mind should you see the waters begin to rise around your home. Ask about adding flood coverage to your Florida Peninsula policy today to secure the flood protection you need.
