Private placement of securities

Purpose and authorization Competition in ride and other dispatch services has intensified. The Company seeks to invest in software, hardware and talent to improve completion rates and market share. It may also expand through vertical integration or horizontal consolidation within or across industries. A private placement would allow the Company to raise capital when opportunities arise and preserve working capital for ordinary operations. The Board may place common shares, domestic convertible corporate bonds, or both, in up to four tranches within one year of shareholder approval, with no more than 35 placees per tranche and no general advertising or public solicitation.

Pricing of common shares The subscription price must be at least 100% of the reference price, with no upper limit. The reference price is the higher of the simple average closing price for a selected period of one, three or five business days before pricing and the simple average closing price over the 30 business days before pricing. The closing prices are adjusted for stock and cash dividends and capital reductions as described in the Chinese proposal.

Pricing of domestic convertible corporate bonds The registered bonds are issued at 100% of their NT$100,000 face value, carry a zero coupon, mature no later than five years after issuance and convert into newly issued common shares. The conversion price must be at least 100% of the theoretical price, with no upper limit. The proposal uses the higher of the adjusted short-period and 30-business-day average closing prices described above, and requires an overall valuation model reflecting all rights under the issuance terms. Rights that cannot be included in the model must be removed from the terms.

Eligible placees Eligibility is limited to persons permitted under Article 43-6 of the Securities and Exchange Act and applicable regulatory interpretations. No placee had been identified at the time of the proposal. Priority is given to strategic investors who can contribute to the Company's long-term development and competitiveness and benefit existing shareholders. As a general rule, insiders and related parties will be excluded. If a placee is identified before dispatch of the notice, its name, ten largest shareholders and relationship with the Company will be disclosed as required. Strategic investors may help develop markets, improve technology, lower costs or strengthen relationships with suppliers and customers.

Rationale and limits Private placement facilitates timely fundraising, may reduce funding costs, and permits staged issuance aligned with market conditions and operating needs. Transfer restrictions can support long-term relationships with strategic investors. The ceiling is 25 million common shares and NT$5 billion in domestic convertible corporate bonds, as applicable. Bond issuance is also subject to Article 247 of the Company Act.

Use of proceeds Proceeds may supplement working capital, repay bank loans, improve the financial structure and ratios, fund R&D and data analytics software and hardware, increase platform use and market share, and support acquisitions or consolidation. The use of proceeds and expected benefits may change with the timing of the fundraising and will be disclosed as required.

Issuance and transfer Terms are based on applicable law, securities industry self-regulatory rules and market practice. Under Article 43-8 of the Securities and Exchange Act, privately placed securities are generally restricted from free transfer for three years after delivery. From the end of year one through year three, transfers to eligible persons may be made within applicable holding-period and quantity limits. After three years the Company may evaluate applying for listing or OTC trading. Common shares issued directly or upon conversion carry the same rights and obligations as outstanding common shares.

Implementation The Board may determine or adjust the amount, terms, timing, intended use and other implementation matters in light of market conditions, regulatory instructions, operating assessments or objective circumstances, subject to the approved pricing percentages. The Chair may negotiate and sign the relevant contracts and documents and take the actions required to carry out the plan. The Board may handle remaining matters in accordance with law.

Election of directors

The seventh Board term expired on June 8, 2026. Shareholders are asked to elect 11 directors, including four independent directors, under the candidate nomination system. The eighth Board term runs from June 12, 2026 through June 11, 2029. The Board reviewed the candidates' qualifications on April 29, 2026. See Attachment 5 for candidate information and Appendix 3 for the Rules for Election of Directors.

Other business

Waiver of Non-Competition Restrictions Article 209 of the Company Act requires a director who engages in activities within the Company's scope of business for the director's own account or for another person to disclose the material details to shareholders and obtain their approval. The newly elected directors and their representatives may concurrently serve as directors or managers of other companies with similar business activities. The Board requests approval to lift the applicable restrictions to facilitate the Company's operations. See Attachment 5 for concurrent positions.
