This new collection of mineral landscapes comes from the encounter between stone and steel. These landscapes are there in their brutality. They have a strong presence. The roughness of the stones contrasts with the polish of the patinated and waxed steel and the preciousness of the brass. Mirrors play the role of the sky, reflecting flashes of light and reflecting the elements. It is a series of unique pieces, due to the stone chosen and the shapes created with random contours. Balance occurs naturally during creation. The stone is an extension of the sculpture and gives it balance.

A work that mixes plastic sensibility and know-how, the traces and marks made during production are left visible on the surfaces of the pieces, which contribute to strong connections with the designs and stones that inspire these sculptural universes.

These pieces of furniture exist as sculptural volumes. Leaving space for the imagination, this invites us to think of new uses ; an experimental and sculptural approach that leads to unexpected forms.
