Ustekhadoos

Ustekhadoos, scientifically known as Lavandula stoechas, is a fragrant, evergreen shrub from the Lamiaceae family. It is a hardy plant with narrow, gray-green leaves and distinctive purple flower spikes topped with petal-like bracts, giving it an ornamental appeal. Native to the Mediterranean region, it thrives in dry, sunny climates and is widely cultivated for its aromatic and therapeutic qualities. The whole plant, especially its flowers, is highly valued for its pleasant fragrance and medicinal significance.
