

General Interest Application

Verne is developing a breakthrough on-site power network to power the most critical sectors of the economy: ports, data centers, construction, EV charging and more. The electricity grid is bottlenecked and these sectors are being bottlenecked by a lack of access to reliable, on-site power. Verne provides on-site power to keep these sectors running, all while increasing efficiency and reducing harmful air pollutants. Verne is backed by Amazon's Climate Pledge Fund, United Airlines, Caterpillar, NextEra Energy, Trucks Venture Capital, Collaborative Fund, and other leading investors, and is supported by the U.S. Department of Energy, ARPA-E, Alberta Innovates, Newlab, Breakthrough Energy Fellows, and others.

What you'll do

If you think you can make an impact on Verne's mission, please send a resume and cover letter. Even if there is not a relevant opening right now, we would love to hear from you about why you want to work for Verne and what you can contribute!

Benefits

- Medical, dental and vision insurance
- Flexible hours & paid time off
- 401(k)
- Opportunity to work with a collaborative and passionate team
- Opportunity to shape the rapidly growing green hydrogen industry
- Opportunity to work closely with leading decarbonization partners and meaningfully contribute to the decarbonization of hard-to-abate sectors like off-road equipment, heavy-duty trucks, power generation and more

Location

In person in San Francisco, California is strongly preferred, though Verne does allow some roles to work remotely depending on the requirements of the role.

About Verne

At Verne we value a diversity of approaches to critical thinking. We aim to establish an environment that welcomes different perspectives, where informed discussions flourish and each individual voice is respected. The team thrives in asking questions to gain a more nuanced understanding. We all strive to provide constructive feedback and ultimately aim to make each of us a better listener, thinker, and leader. Lastly, our mission is ambitious and difficult, so we don't forget to have fun!
