

CRSB CERTIFIED QUALIFYING CATTLE*

*For Québec beef farmers

Requirements

To qualify for a CRSB Claim:

Cattle must move through CRSB Certified Operations (that are in scope for a certification audit) from birth up to and including the primary processor.

Beef must be from animals with documented records, which must include:

- animal identification (RFID tag)
- birth date (age verification) evidence from a CRSB approved live-cattle chain of custody verifier, and
- cattle movements showing that they moved through only applicable CRSB Certified Operations.

As of September 2026, approved live cattle chain of custody verifiers include Les Producteurs de bovins du Québec (PBQ) for beef farmers in Québec, and the Canadian Cattle Identification Agency (CCIA) for the rest of Canada.

Make the most of your certification by giving your cattle a chance to qualify through a CRSB Certified supply chain by completing these essential steps.

- 1 Get and maintain CRSB Certification
- 2 Agree to share contact & certification status information

Written consent to sharing information for CRSB Certified Chain of Custody purposes is part of the Certification Body's audit process. In Québec, the certified producer also needs to sign the « Formulaire de consentement à la communication de renseignements sur votre entreprise à un tiers » to enable Attestra to share applicable information with PBQ.

The following Information will be shared:

- Name • Email • Mailing address
- Attestra Account PRO • Certification date • Audit type
- Certification status change / de-certification date

You can give consent at any time by contacting PBQ.

- 3 Submit birth dates

Input birth dates into the Attestra system for the cattle born and tagged on your operation.

Animals born-on your operation within six months of your CRSB certification date are eligible.

- 4 Submit move-in events

Move-in events must be submitted to the Attestra system each time eligible cattle move to a new operation.

Qualifying animals moved-in from another CRSB Certified Operation within six months of your CRSB certification date are eligible.

COMPLETING THE STEPS

What you need to know

1 Sharing information for Chain of Custody purposes

For cattle to be traced through CRSB Certified supply chains, information is needed for Chain of Custody purposes. Your operation's contact and certification status information, collected by the Certification Body during the CRSB Certified audit process, requires your informed (written) consent to be accessed or shared by CRSB with the program's chain of custody providers. Completion of the Data Consent Form is required for Attestra to share applicable information with PBQ.

To add or change consent permissions, contact PBQ at pbqcertification@upa.qc.ca. Permission can be changed at any time.

2 Submitting birth dates

The CRSB Certified program requires that cattle must move through CRSB Certified Operations from birth up to and including the primary processors to qualify for a CRSB Claim. Birth dates provide a starting datapoint for each animal in a supply chain from which to trace that animal's conformance to the CRSB Certified program requirements.

The birth date must be submitted to Attestra by the herd of origin and the animal must have been born on your premises within 6 months of CRSB certification.

3 Submitting move-ins

A move-in event shows that an animal has been moved to a new operation/premises as it moves through the supply chain. Move-ins provide a datapoint from which to trace that animal's conformance to the CRSB Certified program requirements (that the animal was born and raised only CRSB Certified Operations, and processed in a CRSB Certified facility), for each stage in an animal's lifecycle in a supply chain.

Move-in events must be submitted to Attestra each time eligible cattle move to a new operation. Qualifying animals moved in from another CRSB Certified Operation within six months of your CRSB certification date are eligible.
