Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing returns through a selection of non-equity investments.

December Commentary

Funds like Horizon need to generate returns which are consistently ahead of inflation and cash, without taking too much incremental risk. This input is our stated Investment Objective (above), and the output is returns which have been substantially ahead of inflation.

After a tricky year of readjusting to the period of higher post-Covid inflation, the fund's performance this year was strong, reflecting higher risk-free rates.

Higher cash and bond yields benefit our portfolio through the tailwind of higher non-equity returns. They also create more optionality for downside protection as higher rates have further to be cut in the event of a recession, which would create capital gains through our bond holdings.

We expect forward returns to be higher than the past few years, given the starting rates of interest and inflation.

The combination of earnings growth and the potential for valuation re-rating within our equity portfolio will be a meaningful driver of these returns.

We made a few changes to this allocation last year – buying shares in four businesses with fantastic growth prospects at compelling valuations: Interactive Brokers, Cencora, UnitedHealth and Ryanair. We also added to a few positions, notably our infrastructure stocks, Vinci and Eiffage.

We sold our holdings in Texas Instruments and Goldman Sachs, while cutting our positions in JP Morgan and Shell.

Overall, the equity allocation remains biased towards the US, but with meaningful international exposure. It is inexpensive (on 15x PE) and growing well ahead of the market, with the ability to maintain these growth rates for many years to come. Importantly, it is highly diversified, offering a range of sources of potential return while mitigating concentration risk.

While we maintained a small holding in inflation-linked bonds last year (where performance was quite muted) we were predominantly invested in short-dated conventional bonds. As we move through 2025, if the US economy remains strong, we would expect a revival in inflation expectations and are positioned to redeploy cash into TIPS should this become more likely.

Strategy’s Previous Track Record - This is a composite of performance of long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Latitude Horizon Fund, which launched on 1 November 2016. Prior to this, from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016, the portfolio was managed at Odey Asset Management LLP (“Odey”). The information above is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that at Odey the portfolio changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. The performance in the chart above, from 23 April 2014 to 31 October 2016, is a carve-out of the actual long only portfolio at Odey, which includes both long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
