

Latitude Horizon Fund

Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing returns through a selection of non-equity investments.

January Commentary

2024 will be a big year for the world. Most major democracies will have elections, with more people scheduled to vote this year than ever before. The first vote of the year in Taiwan saw a President returned that has rebuffed Chinese claims of sovereignty over the region.

It's not only in the East that tensions have risen; Houthi attacks on ships in the Red Sea have caused shipping rates to spike causing a new bout of inflation on goods. We continue to believe that owning energy companies (BP and Shell) is one of the best hedges on inflation, alongside our portfolio of inflation-linked bonds (that currently only price in longer term inflation of 2.3% in the US).

We see this as an asymmetric bet – not only because of the impact that exogenous events like the Houthi attacks can have, but also because if it wasn't for record US Shale oil production, the energy market would likely be in deficit.

Recent inflation volatility has caused large swings in the bond market, as investors question whether rate cuts are due to lower inflation, or lower growth.

Yield curves remain flat, which is why we have been cautious to take more duration risk although we do recognise the potential attraction of longer dated bonds in the event of a collapse in short-term rates.

Our longer duration inflation-linked bonds profited handsomely in the last quarter of 2023 as real yields fell from 2.5% to 1.9% as nominal rates fell more than breakeven inflation expectations.

Unconventional times call for unconventional portfolio construction.

At Latitude we aim to provide our investors with both ballast, in the form of our non-equities which currently yield over 5%, alongside propulsion in the form of our equities, growing their fundamental value historically (and based on our bottom-up predictions) in the mid-teens.

With the S&P500 reaching all-time highs this month the market is signaling a return to hope that the Fed can navigate the narrow path to a soft landing.

The truth, however, is that nobody knows - we are still waiting for a slew of economic data and company earnings for the end of 2023 are only just kicking off now.

Our approach does not involve trying to predict the future but investing in the world as we see it today, which continues to be highly unpredictable.

Strategy's Previous Track Record - This is a composite of performance of long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Latitude Horizon Fund, which launched on 1 November 2016. Prior to this, from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016, the portfolio was managed at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey"). The information above is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that at Odey the portfolio changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. The performance in the chart above, from 23 April 2014 to 31 October 2016, is a carve-out of the actual long only portfolio at Odey, which includes both long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
