Overseeing this specialized service line is Cristina Beloud, our Director of Advanced Training and Special Projects.

With a distinguished 25-year career in the U.S. Secret Service, where she conducted presidential and global protective assignments, crisis leadership operations, and advanced planning for high-threat environments, Cristina brings with her an unparalleled level of security expertise.

She served as the Supervisory Advance Agent for former President George W. Bush's anti-terrorism summit at Al Assad Air Base in Iraq and led the Tucson field office during the 2011 Gabrielle Giffords shooting response, earning national recognition for outstanding public service.

Following her retirement, Cristina directed threat management teams at Amazon's Global Security Operations Center and provided consulting services for Fortune 500 brands and the professional sports industry.

Under Cristina's leadership, Transcend Security's Executive Protection Services combine the discretion and professionalism, of federal-level standards with the flexibility of private sector deployment. This ensures that every assignment, whether an international travel detail, a high-profile public appearance, or a day-to-day engagement, is executed with unmatched expertise and confidence.
