Wall Finishes

Chukum type

It is traditionally used in the construction of the region to make a special mortar known as "chukum stucco", this is a waterproof coating that is applied to the walls of houses and buildings, providing protection against humidity and the tropical climate of the region.

It has also gained popularity in interior design and decoration, being used in the manufacture of flooring, wall coverings and decorative elements such as flowerpots and vases. It has an attractive appearance, with shades ranging from amber to dark brown, giving it a natural rustic look.

Wall Finishes

Materials for the construction of walls:

- Division between departments: Block.
- Internal Division of Common Areas: Double-layer gypsum board partition with intermediate insulation.

An acoustic system will be implemented to guarantee a quiet and private environment in each of the departments.

The acoustic system in our walls offers a series of significant benefits. Residents will be able to enjoy a higher level of privacy, avoiding noise interference from other apartments.

A more relaxed and conducive environment for rest is also created, improving the quality of life of all residents.

Floor Finishes

Using natural stone flooring offers a number of benefits, including:

- Durability: Natural stone is a very resistant and durable material.
- Aesthetics and Beauty: Natural stone floors add an elegant, timeless, and sophisticated look to any space.
- Versatility: Each type of stone has its own unique appearance and characteristics, providing flexibility to accommodate different decorating styles and personal preferences.
- Easy maintenance: Natural stone floors are relatively easy to clean and maintain.
- Indoor Air Quality: Unlike some synthetic materials, natural stone floors do not emit Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs), which helps maintain better indoor air quality and reduces health risks.
- Resale Value: Natural stone floors are often highly valued in the real estate market as they are considered a high-quality feature and add value to a property.

Carpentry Finishes

Wood veneer is a material used in the carpentry and decoration industry. It consists of a thin layer of natural wood obtained by cutting or slicing logs into very thin slices. These slices, which can be approximately 0.5 to 0.6 millimeters thick, are adhered to a substrate or board using a lamination process.

Wood veneer offers several advantages compared to other cladding materials, such as:

- The possibility of obtaining a natural and warm appearance.
- Greater dimensional stability.
- The ability to be molded into complex shapes.
