

13 Secret Routes to Get One-Way Business Class Tickets to Europe for $614 to $889, On Major Airlines

January 2025

Any opportunity traveler can participate

Do you avoid coach because it's coach, while shunning Business Class because of the price? Of course, not everyone wants to blow between $3,000 and $6,000+ on a Business Class ticket.

So imagine my smile when I discovered availability of $614 one-way Business Class tickets across the pond and back. A deal like this raises some trade-off decisions you'll need to make, which are good problems to have if you ask me. For example, would I fly coach to the city I originally planned to visit or fly Business Class to a city I wasn't thinking of, but is actually really cool for not much more?

Through unconventional strategies and taking advantage of real options, you could save up to $4,352, or 71%, over a regular Business Class flight to Europe with today's opportunities.

HOW ANYONE CAN GET IT

Star Alliance member, Avianca, frequently offers discounts when you buy its miles, LifeMiles. And FCF's Sweet Redeems Research uncovers the secret routes where LifeMiles can be redeemed cheaply. Simple as that.

You can purchase LifeMiles for as low as 1.27¢ per mile during the current sale through January 31, and you can buy up to 500,000 miles (post-bonus) annually. Need more miles? With FCF's unlimited miles strategy, no problem.

Note that LifeMiles bonus deals only apply to existing LifeMiles members as we've said many times before. If you're not a current member, no problem. Become a LifeMiles member now so you are ready for the next sale, because they come up regularly.

THE DEAL GETS BETTER

LifeMiles offers a subscription plan called LifeMiles+, which offers members a variety of perks, including a 10% discount on award tickets, for just $20. We'll include this 10% discount in the sample deals below.

How good can it get?

MORE TO KNOW

#1 You can search for availability using LifeMiles online

You just log in to your account, which only takes a few minutes to open.

#2 Low taxes for LifeMiles partner flights

Lufthansa and SWISS can charge as much as $1,973 or more in taxes alone on Business Class flights to Europe. They call them “fuel surcharges.” So much for a “free” award seat.

LifeMiles and most U.S. airlines typically don’t hit you with taxes that high (generally, they’re around $100 to $375 or less).

#3 Miles will not expire as long as you have qualifying earning activity every 12 months, which can include purchasing LifeMiles (for a little as 20 bucks). You can do that.

#4 The LifeMiles site can be glitchy when searching for flights, with a little patience, I have always been able to work it.

Not everyone can be that flexible. Consider positioning flights when award seats are not offered on your route. And of course, don’t book backwards.

FINAL THOUGHTS

Is travel perfectionism holding you back? FCF always recommends grabbing your ticket when you come across a good deal or something you can live with — and if it’s not perfect, upgrade later.

The Fastest, Easiest, and Cheapest Way to Improve Your Life: The Power of The Upgrade Process Options Mindset, Part 1

January 2025

Get the best seats in the sky and on the ground — by being informed and having an “options mindset.”

When I walk into a restaurant, I often stride right past the maître d’ if I can — not making eye contact, as if I know exactly where I’m going.

Why? Because I want to get the lay of the land before I’m offered a table. I want to know my options, so I can match them with my desires, according to my baseline, i.e., the mood I’m in or the occasion at hand.

For example:

- What kinds of table options are potentially available? Small/large tables, high/low-top, booths, etc.

- What kinds of location options are potentially available? Window, proximity to bathroom, bar, fireplace, more privacy, outdoors / indoors, chef's counter, nooks or alcoves, cozy, semi-private areas, etc.
- What kinds of seat options are potentially available? (You already know I like comfy ones!) Hard wooden chairs vs. cushy seats/sofa seating are often available in lounges or more upscale dining areas.

Each seating option can offer a different dining experience, from intimate and private to social and interactive. The choice of seating can also affect the ambiance, interactions with others, and how I experience the meal and my companion/s.

Here's the deal: Time is precious and I'm not about to let someone else decide exactly how I will spend it if I can help it. Getting the most bang for your buck is smart.

You scout the place because The Upgrade Mindset isn't just for the skies; it's for every aspect of your life, including where you dine.

Being aware of my options, before someone decides for me, is key. The more you know, the more you can ask for. Information is power.

This only happens if you follow The Upgrade Process and Mindset.

Worst Case: If I can't make it past the front desk and I'm led straight to a table that doesn't suit me, especially if the place is half empty, I'll ask, "What other options are available?" Politely inquire about the availability of a better seat.

THE UPGRADE MINDSET APPLIED TO BOOKING FLIGHTS

Let's tie this into travel:

- What kinds of trip-type options are there?
 - One-way / Round-trip / Multi-City / Multi-Trip?
 - The Upgrade Mindset loves the word "multi" :)
- What kinds of ticket origination options are there?
 - If you fly often to an international destination from the US, you could save up to 62% on Business Class by starting your journey from there.
- What kinds of class options are there?
 - Same Class/Mixed Class
 - If one flight segment is more important, like a night flight, consider upgrading that one while downgrading the less critical day leg. We call this "horses for courses" — a great way to get what you need while getting the most bang for your buck.

THE UPGRADE PROCESS & MINDSET APPLIED TO LIFE

Before making any decisions to implement, explore your options, based on how you prioritize your desires, according to your baseline.

This isn't just about dining or flying; it's about life. Most folks take what's handed to them. They sit where the maître d' plops them, or they book whatever their travel agent suggests, or just follow their usual default thinking. But you, you're different. You ask, "What are my options?"

So here's the deal: Change your process, your mindset, and you'll find yourself up front not just on the plane, but in life, getting the most bang for your buck while others are content with whatever life tosses their way by default — instead of enjoying the best possible outcome.

Welcome to The Upgrade Process and Mindset, where every choice is an opportunity to live like you mean it.

See you there.

A man with grey hair, wearing a dark blue shirt and a gold watch, is reclining in a private airplane cabin. He is looking down at a smartphone in his hands. A laptop is open on a table in front of him, and a food tray with a drink and snacks is also on the table. The cabin has wood paneling and oval windows.

How to Get Free In-Class Upgrades on Emirates and Lufthansa—and Why Everyone from Trip Dreamers to Trip Optimizers Should Want to Know, Part I

January 2025

Plus, discover where to find the new First Class seats on Emirates and Business Class on Lufthansa

Airline cabins age like everything else, and eventually, the new must replace the old. It's a slow process, though—like watching a caterpillar transform into a butterfly but with more delays and less poetry. And while airlines love to shout about the upcoming state-of-the-art seats, in fact, an airline's fleet is like a patchwork quilt of new and old seats until the rollouts are completed.

While an inconsistent product isn't great for consumers wanting value for their dollar, let's look at the opportunities from the four distinct perspectives of the "travel lifecycle."

- Trip Dreaming
- Trip Planning

- Trip Booking
- Trip Optimizing

HOW TRIP DREAMERS CAN UPGRADE BY KNOWING NEW SEAT ROLLOUT STATUS

Let's say you're not even sure where or when you'll travel yet—you're just craving a BIG trip. If you are like many modern travelers, you view the vacation experience as beginning the moment you step on the plane, especially if you're eyeing an opulent First Class in-flight experience.

Enter Emirates' new First Class suites, which are debatably the most luxurious in the world. The airline's latest new seats are available only on select routes to/from Dubai, such as Chicago.

You can book these suites using the airline's reward points, which you can get by transferring your Amex points to the airline's miles. But keep in mind that routes with the new seats are subject to change.

While I'm pleased with any of the airline's First Class seats, my favorites are on its A380s. You can find more on Emirates' First Class here.

By being well-informed about these specific routes, Trip Dreamers can strategically design their itineraries to include the most lavish and immersive in-flight options available. For now, connect via Chicago for the best Emirates First Class if you can.

HOW TRIP PLANNERS CAN UPGRADE BY KNOWING NEW SEAT ROLLOUT STATUS

Let's say you're close to being ready to book, but you didn't start out by designing your trip around the best seats. Half the time, you're going to make a connection from a smaller airport or the destination airport. And often you have a choice between connecting airport options.

Maybe you live in Boise and plan to fly to Budapest, connecting through a major European hub, for example on Lufthansa. You could take the standard path with Lufthansa, connecting through Frankfurt or Munich.

Or you could book a slightly different route that offers the best seats. How? By knowing that Lufthansa is in the middle of rolling out new seats, and that the new seats are only offered on a few routes \(SFO, JFK, ORD\).

Heck, you could even consider taking a route that has a slightly longer layover but offers much better seats. Fares are largely the same regardless of the routing, generally speaking.

By strategically selecting connecting flights with better seats, Trip Planners can net free in-class upgrades by knowing where the better seats are and when they become available.

OLD LUFTHANSA BUSINESS CLASS SEATS

NEW LUFTHANSA BUSINESS CLASS SEATS

HOW TRIP BOOKERS CAN UPGRADE BY KNOWING NEW SEAT ROLLOUT STATUS

When it comes to booking, the pressure is on to find the best fare and secure a seat. However, most travelers overlook an essential step: identifying the aircraft and cabin details. According to a 2023 study by Skyscanner, nearly 60% of travelers were unaware of the specific aircraft type they were booking, which can lead to big differences in comfort. Airlines like Lufthansa label routes with Allegris-equipped aircraft, allowing travelers to intentionally select flights offering modern seating arrangements. More on this soon.

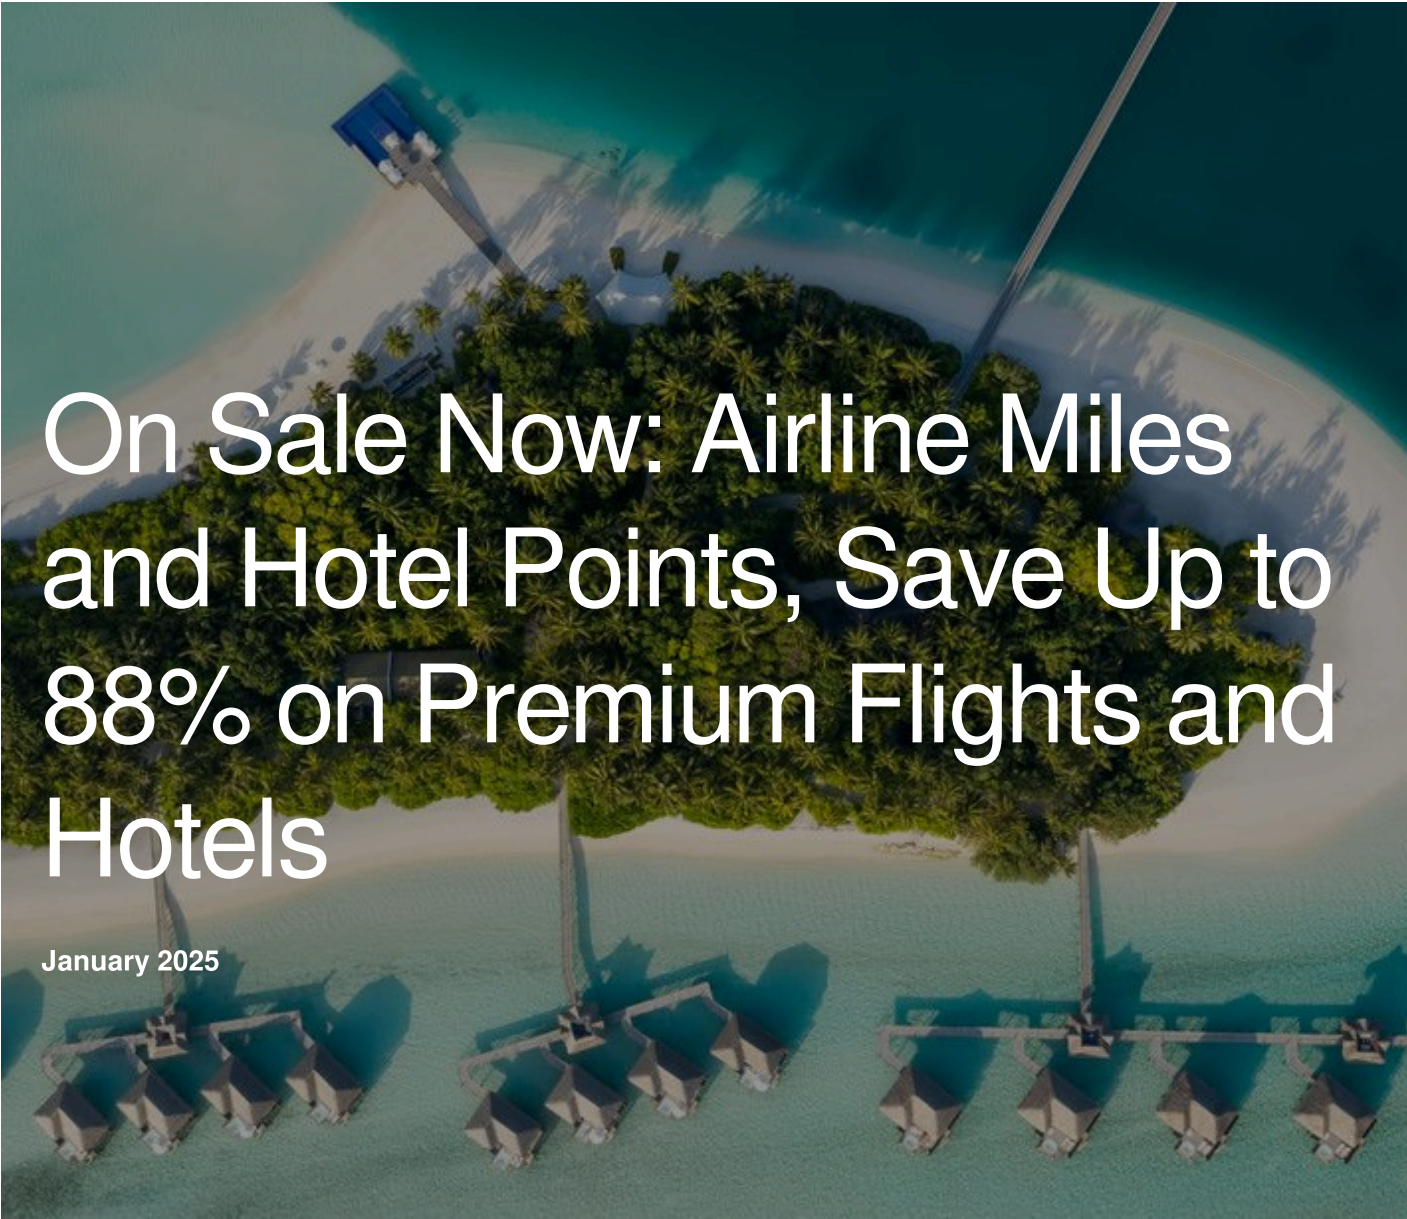

HOW TRIP OPTIMIZERS CAN UPGRADE BY KNOWING NEW SEAT ROLLOUT STATUS

So, you booked your ticket to Budapest three months ago. Good for you—Budapest is lovely. But news flash: Lufthansa might have just rolled out its new Allegris seats on flights from Chicago, New York, or San Francisco, perhaps a decent connection point for you.

Now, here's where a little vigilance can pay off big. Most airlines let you change your ticket with minimal or no fees. Are you willing to spend a few minutes on the phone or online to potentially trade up to a newer, more comfortable cabin at no extra cost? Or will you keep your current itinerary, haunted by the question, "Could this flight have been better?"

THE TAKEAWAY:

Whether you're dreaming, planning, booking, or optimizing a trip, understanding the airline seat rollout landscape is like holding a backstage pass. You'll know where the show really happens, ensuring you get the best seat in the house—figuratively and literally. And while the journey might be long, wouldn't you rather travel like a butterfly than a caterpillar?
