

13 Ways to Win When There's Only One Mileage Seat Available

July 2024

Is it game over when there's only one mileage seat? No!

You don't need me to tell you that finding mileage award seats is tough in Business and First Class. It's mostly what you tell me. I get it, it's a challenge for me too, despite the fact that it's what I do for a living. But, it's not impossible, even when you want to travel up front with a loved one to share the experience. Let's look at 13 ways to win this high-stakes game of musical chairs.

Are you ready to win mileage musical chairs?

1. START WITH ONE

Most travelers search for mileage award seats based on the number of people they're flying with. Of course, right? No! At FCF, we start by searching for one seat only. When that's spotted, we search for the next seat. That's because when you look for two seats (or more), you won't see the one-seat availability options, which means you'll find much less availability. Or the per-seat cost is much more (we look at a sweet workaround this month, right here). It's a website design thing I'd love to change, but that's for another day.

Singapore Airlines typically only releases one First Class award seat at a time, but their seats gradually become available right up to departure time. And they're not the only airline to do so. So when you do get that precious award seat, it doesn't mean you won't get another; you just have to play the musical chairs game and wait. Then when the music stops, slam your patootie down on that seat (knowing another may open up, as well)!

2. UPGRADE CLOSER TO DEPARTURE

It's a travel truth: award space tends to open up as the day of departure approaches. So that means you need to keep your eyes on the prize to win. You need to get Alexa to remind you to keep checking availability because it's always changing. For example, Etihad usually only opens up award space to partners two or so weeks before departure for First Class, which even holds true for flights to regions such as the South Pacific.

3. BIGGER IS BETTER

This is basic math, but the bigger the airplane or cabin, the more chance of getting more than one mileage seat. For example, look at the Los Angeles-Frankfurt route on Lufthansa. Lufthansa offers a nonstop flight on an A340-600 aircraft that has 44 to 56 Business Class seats, and a B747-8 aircraft that has 80 Business Class seats. Those extra 36 seats increase your odds of low-cost mileage award availability quite a bit.

4. TAKE AN EARLIER OR LATER FLIGHT

Let's say you're flying from New York to Paris. There's a flight that departs at 4:30 p.m. and another at 6:30 p.m. Is it the end of the world if you and your traveling companion split up, each scoring a mileage seat on separate flights? Not necessarily. "Save me a seat at Café de Flore for breakfast. Order me a croissant with butter and jam!"

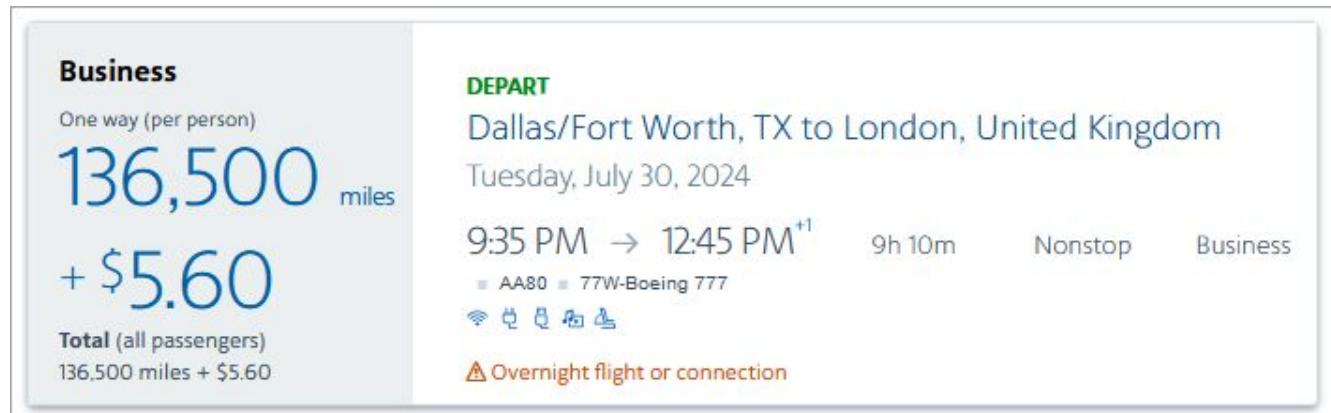

4:30 PM - 5:45 AM (+1 day) AIRFRANCE AF0001 Trip duration: 7h15 Lowest fare 50,000 Miles > +USD 203.30 View flight details 1 seat left

6:30 PM - 7:45 AM (+1 day) AIRFRANCE AF0005 Trip duration: 7h15 Lowest fare 50,000 Miles > +USD 203.30 View flight details 1 seat left

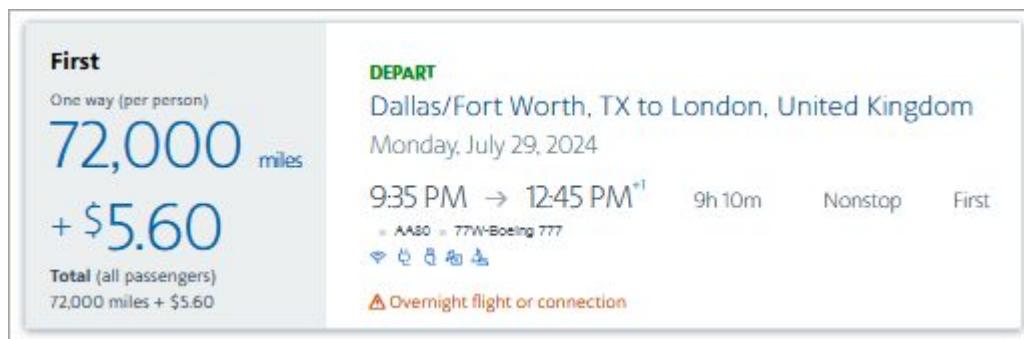

5. TRAVEL A DAY EARLIER OR LATER

Sometimes a little flex can pay off big. Tom has a meeting in London on Wednesday, July 31. Natural instincts say to fly into London the day before. But that would mean missing out on a great opportunity. Namely, a First Class award ticket on July 29 for just 72,000 miles versus a Business Class award on July 30 for 136,500 miles. Look at it this way: You are getting an upgrade and the airline is inviting you to see some London sights before your meeting with not a lot of miles. If at all possible, I'd accept that invitation!

6. CHECK FOR UPGRADES

Even if you only score one seat as an upgrade you're still ahead by earning miles and spending fewer miles. You can grab another seat in Business Class for cash. Hang in there, you can always upgrade closer to your travel date.

7. CONCENTRATE ON THE LONG-HAUL SEGMENT

If you're traveling internationally from a smaller U.S. city, concentrate on the long-haul flight. Say you live in Boise and are going to London via Dallas, the important seats are the ones on the long Dallas-to-London leg. Prioritize the flight segments you want to be most comfortable on even if it means flying in economy from Boise to Dallas.

8. CONNECT THE DOTS

If you're traveling internationally from a hub city, try looking for flights from a nearby smaller departure city or to a nearby destination. You can sometimes find award seats on connecting flights for quite a bit less.

9. BUY ONE TICKET WITH CASH

If all else fails, get the other seat with cash and you're still 50% ahead.

10. GRAB ONE SEAT IN FIRST AND ONE IN BUSINESS

If two people are traveling, grab the one award seat you found in First and then search in Business Class, as it tends to have better availability. Then grab that seat too, which gives you a few choices:

- You can toss a coin to see who gets to sit in First (are you feelin' lucky?)
- This might sound insane, but if you want to sit next to your loved one or business colleague you can offer your First Class seat to the passenger next to them in Business Class as a trade. We're guessing nobody ever said: "Thanks anyway but I'll stay here in Business Class rather than go up to First!"
- Be pragmatic about flying in a different cabin or even a different flight. Maybe you've just spent a romantic week with your partner in Europe. They can do some laptop work while you watch Season One of House of the Dragon.

11. CONSIDER HORSES FOR COURSES

Book in First Class on your night flight out and Business Class on your return flight, possibly even on two different airlines. Comfort-wise, the Horses for Courses strategy pays off because you're prioritizing the overnight flight to your destination versus your return flight where sleep and jet lag don't matter as much.

12. WAITLIST AWARD SPACE

It's worth waitlisting if you're not having much luck with other options. We have seen it come through albeit usually one seat at a time, not two together. All Nippon, Cathay Pacific, Emirates, Singapore Airlines, and United are best for this option. Below is an Emirates screenshot for waitlisted flights.

13. BE PROACTIVE: STOP BOOKING BACKWARDS

You've spent weeks planning a specific trip around specific dates, but maybe you haven't considered your options for premium cabin travel. By the time you're ready to book the airline ticket, you won't be able to find any deals because you've boxed yourself in by the dates of your hotel, tour, or cruise.

FCF gives you a heads-up on multi-seat availability in our Sweet Redemptions alerts with an Availability Calendar. It shows one-, two-, and four-seat availability by route, so you can see what's on offer at a glance. If you want to make award flying as easy as I do, find the best flight deals first, and then plan the rest of your trip around those opportunities.

See you up front.

Lufthansa's Triple Treat Means Lower Costs, More Comfort, & Availability

July 2024

How to get Lufthansa's new Business Class Suite for $2,232 R/T

Lufthansa just served up a trifecta of travel treasures with:

1. New seats and suites
2. Lots of availability using miles
3. A lucrative buy-miles deal that can save up to 67%

And it's as easy as eins, zwei, drei. That's 1, 2, 3, if your German is a little rusty.

NEW SEATS AND SUITES

Let's start where the rubber hits the road, so to speak – seat comfort. Lufthansa just spent a lot of money to make your patootie happy on long-haul flights in every cabin class. They call them Lufthansa Allegris seats. “Allegri” means “cheerful” in Italian so I’m guessing that’s the connection, borrowed from one of their neighbors.

There are two aircraft with Lufthansa’s new Allegris seats at the moment. The A350-900 is a four cabin (First Class, Business Class, Premium Economy, and Economy), and the B787-900 is a three cabin (Business, Premium Economy, and Economy)

First Class on the A350-900 will feature three Above the Clouds First Class Suites and an Above the Clouds First Class Suite Plus for guests traveling together, for up to four First Class seats in total. There’s a double suite inside and two single suites by the window on each side. At 39 square feet, they’re right up there with the largest in the world.

And they’re luxurious, too. You get a personal wardrobe, a big dining table, a suite-wide TV screen, heated and cooled seats with “shoulder sink-in” so you can comfortably sink right into the seat. That’s something that side sleepers will rejoice over (statistics say that’s 74% of you). There’s also lots of tech an arm’s reach away including a tablet control unit, wireless charging station, and noise-canceling headphones. Note that the installation of seats in the First Class cabin has been delayed and will not be installed until the fourth quarter of 2024.

Lufthansa's A350-900 New Allegris First Class Suite Plus

Business Class on the A350-900 features 38 seats including eight suites with beds up to 7 feet 2 inches long, while the B787-900 has 28 suites. Privacy is prioritized with chest-high walls, sliding doors, and extended personal space in the front rows. Catch up on your shows by binging with a monitor up to 27 inches in size. And enjoy ample storage space, too.

You can also connect two suites for guests traveling together, or select from four additional seat options such as an extra-long bed, extra space and work area, a classic Business Class seat, or an exclusive seat directly by the window with a high degree of privacy. Every seat is accessible from the aisle.

Lufthansa's A350-900 New Allegris Business Class Seat

Business Class Allegris seats are also heated and cooled, feature shoulder sink-in, wireless charging module, a personal in-suite minibar, a wardrobe, and Bluetooth connectivity for your devices.

During the introductory phase (lasting several months), limited aircraft will be equipped with the new travel classes. During this period, Business Class passengers can choose their desired seat from five different seat options free of charge.

Premium Economy the A350-900 has 26 modern seats in hard-shell design with more free space, while the B787-900 has 28 seats. There's a whopping two feet more seat pitch than the current layout, wireless charging for mobile devices in the personal center armrest, and noise-canceling headphones for that loud talker behind you.

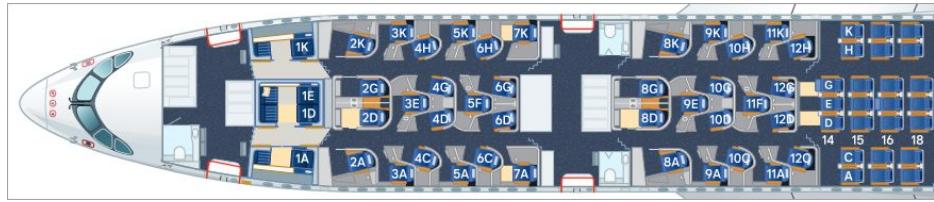

Lufthansa's A350-900 New Allegris Premium Economy Seat

Lufthansa's A350-900 has the new seats and is currently operating on their Toronto- (flights 495/494) and Vancouver- (flights 477/476) Munich (both through the end of July) routes across every cabin except First Class, which has been delayed until the fourth quarter of 2024. With each additional A350, more destinations will be added, starting with Chicago on July 28 on flight 435/434.

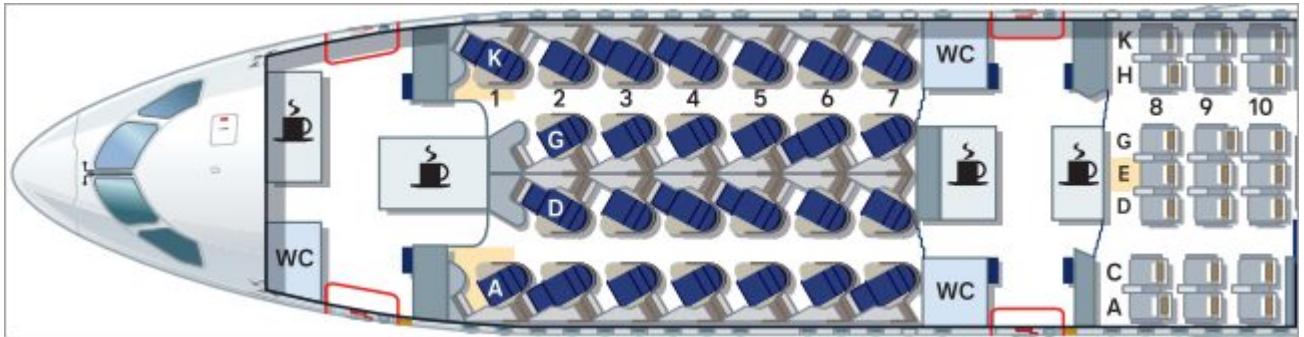

The Toronto- and Vancouver-Munich destinations will change from August 2024, to include, San Francisco and Shanghai will then be served from Munich.

How to find the new Allegris seats on the B787-900: Within Lufthansa's fleet, the aircraft with new seats has 28 Business Class seats including four suites and 28 Premium Economy seats. The aircraft with the old seats has 26 Business Class seats and 21 Premium Economy seats.

SUITE-UP FOR A $2,232 ROUND TRIP FROM CHICAGO, TORONTO AND VANCOUVER TO MUNICH

Lufthansa's mileage purchase program is called Bundle&Go and it's the money saver in Lufthansa's hat trick of treats, with the most recent mileage purchase discount offering a 30% mileage purchase discount and is offered every few months.

The Bundle&Go deal lets you purchase award miles in three increments of 10,000, 50,000, and 100,000 miles. Lufthansa Miles & More members (you can sign up in a few minutes) can purchase one bundle per transaction. There's a maximum purchase of 100,000 miles per transaction and up to 250,000 miles in a calendar year.

If you need more miles, see our unlimited buy-miles strategy. If you max out one account, you can buy 250,000 miles for a total of $3,343, or about 1.34 cents a mile, when on sale, or about 1.9 cents a miles when not on sale. That's a very good cost-per-mile price.

Be aware that Lufthansa's fine print says it could take up to five days for the miles to post. Maybe we got lucky because when we bought miles through this promo they were credited almost instantly.

SAMPLE BUSINESS FLEX PLUS AWARD SAVINGS

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF LUFTHANSA MILEAGE AWARDS: BUSINESS FLEX AND BUSINESS FLEX PLUS. FOR MAXIMUM SAVINGS, FCF

RECOMMENDS THE BUSINESS FLEX PLUS OPTION; MORE ON THAT HERE.

The round-trip cost of a Business Flex Plus ticket between Chicago, Toronto or Vancouver and Munich is 156,000 miles (78,000 each way). So the cost of buying those miles during this sale (plus about $200 in taxes) comes to a total cost of $2,232 or about $3,167 when not on sale, which is still 45%-54% less than regular published fares.

Considering that published Business Class round-trip fares for Chicago-Munich typically go for $5,990, Toronto-Munich goes for $5,746, and Vancouver-Munich for $6,826, your savings are between $3,514 and $4,594 (61%-67%). Fantastisch!

Suite opportunities on Lufthansa have lifted off

AVAILABILITY

Now's the time to experience these new seats. There's a handful of award opportunities available now for up to four people in both Business Class and Premium Economy between Toronto- and Vancouver-Munich through the end of July.

Please note that availability and aircraft are subject to change. Keep an eye out for availability on upcoming routes with these new seats in FCF's Newsroom.

BONUS

Although it is not the new seat just yet, First Class is still a great option when miles are on sale as we've talked about here, here, here, here, here, here, and here.

U-Turn, U-Save. FCF's Guide to First & Business Class Fares

July 2024

Save up to 62% on First and Business Class fares — and how to easily find them.

By now FCF readers know all about flash fares and how fast they can disappear. We haven't seen the best of them in a while. Recently, fares haven't been quite as low and they have been hanging around a bit longer than usual, so we refer to them as tactical fares. But you still have to jump on them before they're gone.

Case in point: the \$3,489 United Business Class fares to the South Pacific we alerted you about in April that were available for only a week or two and then disappeared. And just last week, we were in the middle of putting together an article for some deliciously low \$3,394 First Class fares that also didn't stick around for long. So we scrapped that piece.

That prompted us to dig deeper using Google Flights and find that there are still some low First and Business Class fares available using our handy-dandy U-Turn strategy. So we'll show you how to find these fares.

U are going the right way

1- FLIP THE SCRIPT AND SAVE

We wrote recently about our lucrative U-Turn strategy in Business Class, FCF's U-Turn Strategy Can Net First Class for Less than Biz, and FCF's Three U-Turn Strategies That Can Net First Class to Asia for Nearly the Cost of Biz.

The U-Turn strategy profits from the knowledge that Europe-U.S.-Europe round-trip flights cost WAY less than those for U.S.-Europe-U.S. The idea is that if you make a "U-Turn" and start your trip in Europe, you end up saving a lot. In this report, we're looking at the U-Turn strategy in First and Business Class.

Of course, you need to get to Europe to start the strategy, and you'll end up in Europe at the end of the round-trip. So you'll also need to book trips to Europe and back to the U.S. That will turn some people off.

But as we'll demonstrate with the "keep it going" strategy, you can launch more "U-Turn" trips from Europe, saving more with each one you do.

2 – STRATEGY TO FIND THE LOWEST FARES

If you searched for fares on Google Flights, you would see that British Airways offers a lower fare than American Airlines for round-trip from Europe to the U.S. For example, for a round-trip U-Turn from Dublin to San Francisco in First Class, British Airways charges USD $2,851, while American charges USD $3,710 for the same trip. If you booked directly on American, you would not know about the lower fare offered by British Airways for the same flights on the same dates. This is a perfect example of why FCF suggests not being tied to one loyalty program.

3 – HOW TO FIND LOW FIRST AND BUSINESS CLASS U-TURN FARES FROM EUROPE TO THE U.S.: FCF'S 10-STEP GUIDE

How to search for fares on Google Flights.

1. Select “Flights.”
2. Select Class.
3. Input your departure city.
4. Use a placeholder destination (any will do as it will be changed on the next screen).
5. Choose random dates (any will do as it will be changed on the next screen).

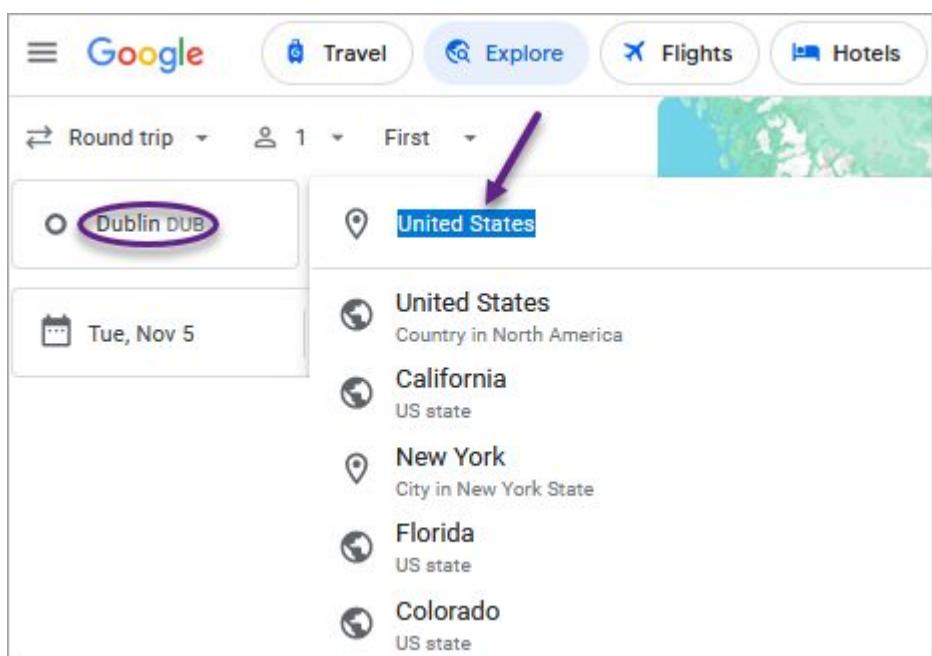

Click “Search”

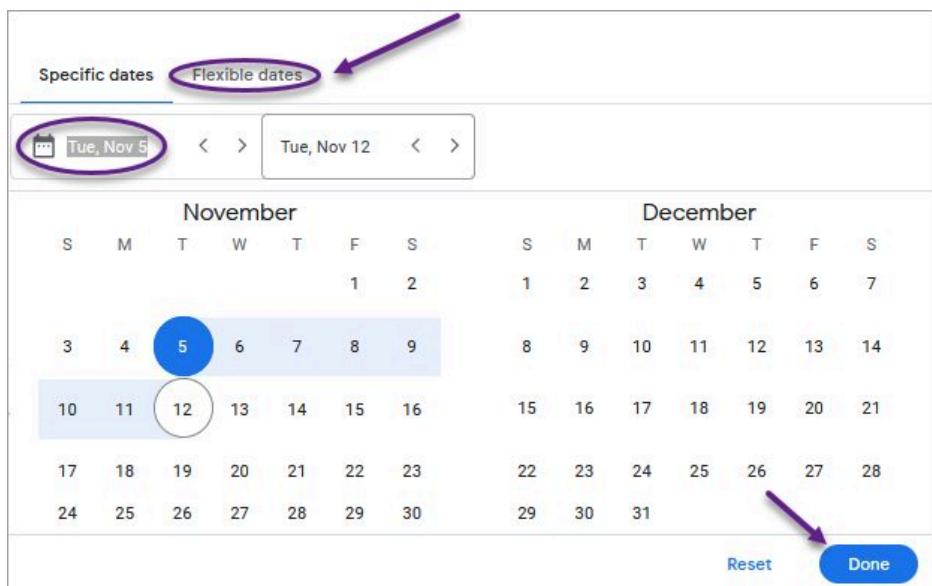

6. Apply filters

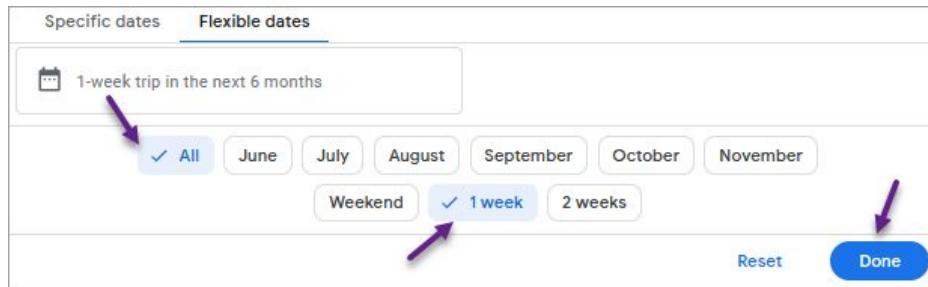

7. Change the placeholder departure city to Dublin and the placeholder destination from London to the United States by typing in "United States." You can also look for a specific country by simply typing it in. For instance, if you want to see fares for South America, type in "South America."

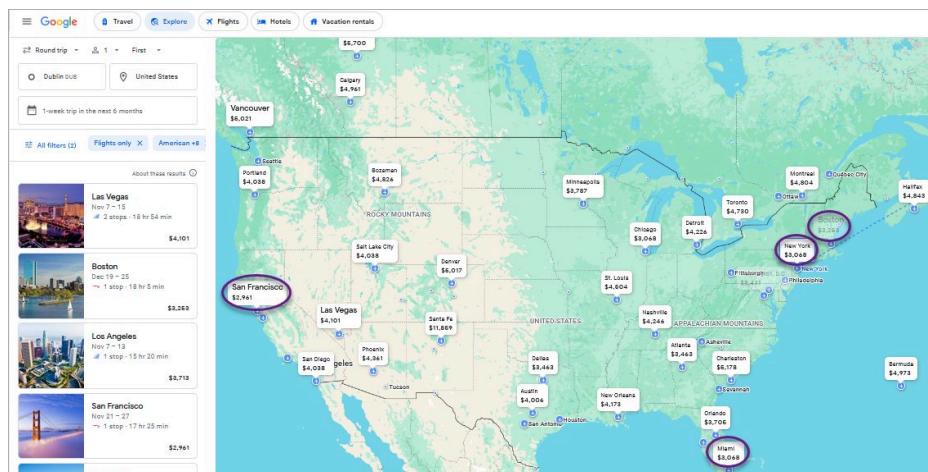

8. Select "departure date" and the option for "Flexible dates" will become available for you to select.

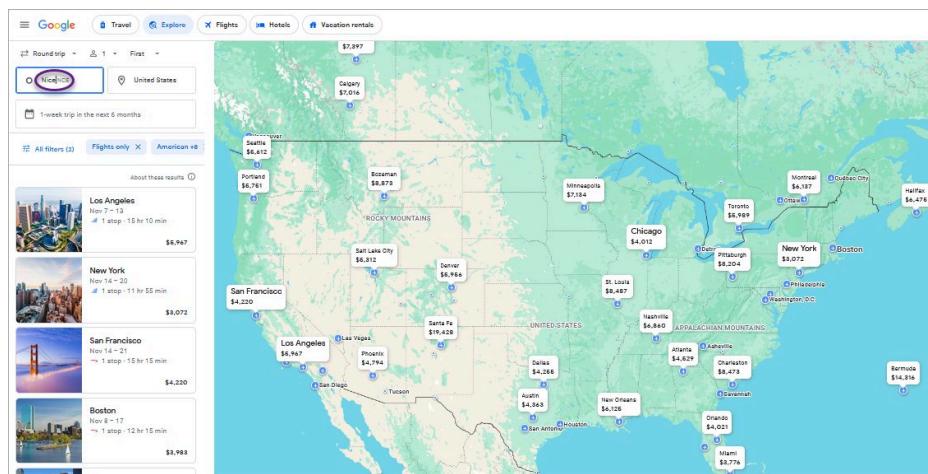

9. Select your date preferences. Either “All” for six months or a specific month to see the lowest fares within this time frame.

10. View your results:

If Dublin is not your choice, change it to Nice. If Nice is not your choice, change it to any destination you choose.

KEEP IT GOING

As mentioned, it's a start-in-Europe play, so you need to get there and back with either a cheap fare or by using your miles. But the savings can more than cover those flights. And once you're in Europe you can keep the strategy humming, saving more with each round-trip. As we sing in the corridors of FCF HQ, "U-turn, you win." Before I add, (beginning with a perfect middle C baritone note):

"C you up front..."

Our Sidestep Hustle Gets You Around High Fares to Asia

July 2024

How to save big with alternate strategies

Last month we looked at the Sidestep Hustle to avoid high fares to Europe. This month we look at Asia where this fancy dance step continues to deliver.

The Sidestep Hustle came about when we saw much lower fares from departure and arrival cities that were very close to other cities. For example, Miami is only 192 miles from Orlando, and yet, AND YET, an Orlando-Tokyo R/T Business Class fare costs $5,256 less than Miami-Tokyo. That's a Boogie Wonderland of savings! Another sidestep is the airline you choose. In our examples further below, you'll see just how much you can save by simply considering another airline.

SIDESTEP HUSTLE #1 ALTERNATE U.S. DEPARTURE CITY

The tables below show how much you can save by departing from a U.S. city that's close to another on a flight to an Asian destination when fares are high. We've grouped them by airline alliance. For example, Oneworld fares for travel from Philadelphia to Bangkok cost $9,985, while from New York they're $4,959. Those cities are only 97 miles apart, but departing from New York costs $5,026 less than from Philadelphia. In other words, for each and every mile that it takes to get from Philly to New York, you save $52. That's a sparkling disco ball of value per mile.

You can pay $9,813 for travel from Dallas to Osaka or $4,587 from Austin. Since those cities are only 190 miles apart, it might be worth considering a "positioning flight."

SIDESTEP HUSTLE #2 ALTERNATE AIRLINE

Here's another way to do The Hustle. Sometimes you have to look beyond your airline or alliance to get the best fare. Many travelers, especially "elite" travelers, go to their favorite airline websites and end up missing great flight opportunities as a result. Look at the Miami-Tokyo example below. It's the same route and yet a Sidestep Hustle from American or United to Delta saves you more than $5,060.

The Sidestep Hustle is a game-changer for savvy travelers who want to avoid high fares to Asia. The examples we've shared here will get you to Asia at a fraction of the normal cost. So next time you're heading to the East, dance a little Sidestep Hustle to net big savings.

Hidden Premium Economy Low-Cost Upgrade to Asia on Singapore Airlines

July 2024

Get Premium Economy for just a little more than economy

Sometimes upgrades appear from the unlikeliest of hiding places. In this case, the premium great-way-to-fly carrier, Singapore Airlines.

Singapore operates the A350-900 ULR, or “ultra-long range,” aircraft, which has 67 Business Class and 94 Premium Economy seats. Don’t bother looking for an economy cabin because you won’t find one. This aircraft is available when flying from Los Angeles, New York (JFK and EWR), and San Francisco to Singapore.

If you’re on a budget and flying Premium Economy from San Francisco to Singapore, in particular, Singapore Airlines gives you two low-cost (read: upgrade) options to consider.

OPTION 1

Fly in Premium Economy on Singapore Airlines' A350-900 three-cabin San Francisco-Singapore flights, SQ31 and SQ32, for $2,070. Screenshot below.

ABOUT THE SEAT

Singapore Airlines' Premium Economy Class seat offers a pitch of 38 inches with widths ranging from 18.5 to 19.5 inches. You get the full leather-finish treatment plus an eight-inch recline, calf rest, and foot bar. For readers, every seat has a personal "gooseneck" reading light, as well as a cocktail table and storage space for your phone, book, or water bottle. Each seat has a universal AC outlet and twin USB charging ports.

WHERE TO FIND THE A350-900 ULR

Los Angeles-Singapore flights SQ35 and SQ36 (through Jan. 31, 2025)

New York (JFK)-Singapore flights SQ23 and SQ24

Newark (EWR)-Singapore flights SQ20 and SQ21

San Francisco-Singapore flights SQ33 and SQ34 (from Feb. 1, 2025)

SAVINGS (AND UPGRADES) BEYOND SINGAPORE

The A350-900 is not available beyond Singapore, but you can still save by flying this aircraft to Singapore and then continuing on.

Case in point: You could fly on Cathay Pacific's New York-Sydney via Hong Kong route in economy class and pay $2,458. Or you could upgrade by flying Singapore's A350-900 ULR in Premium Economy for $2,776. That's an upgrade to Premium Economy for just $318 round-trip. Or fly in Premium Economy on Cathay Pacific and pay $3,336.

Pro Tips for United Mileage Award Seat Searches, Plus Treasure Map to Availability

July 2024

Perfect for when there's more than one traveler

Most travelers search for availability depending on the number of people flying. It sounds obvious but we don't do that at FCF. We search for one seat, then search for a second seat. Why? Because when you search for two seats you won't see the one-seat options available. It's just the way airline search engines work. If you search for two seats you'll find much less availability. Plus, the cost can be much more.

Quick example: we searched United for just one seat from Newark to London in Business Class and found one seat for 80,000 miles (lowest miles).

We then searched for two award seats and found two for 115,000 miles each. See what United did there? They didn't add the 80,000 and 115,000 mileage award seats together for a total of 195,000 miles for both. Instead, they were charging 230,000 miles for both.

So we updated our current search to try and get at least one seat for 80,000 miles, but United offered us the same seat for 115,000 miles.

Undeterred, we tried “Advanced Search” and searched for just one seat. Again, United offered it for 80,000 miles (the lowest miles), so we bought it.

Then we purchased the second seat for 115,000 miles for a total of 195,000 miles, instead of 230,000 miles. Take that United!

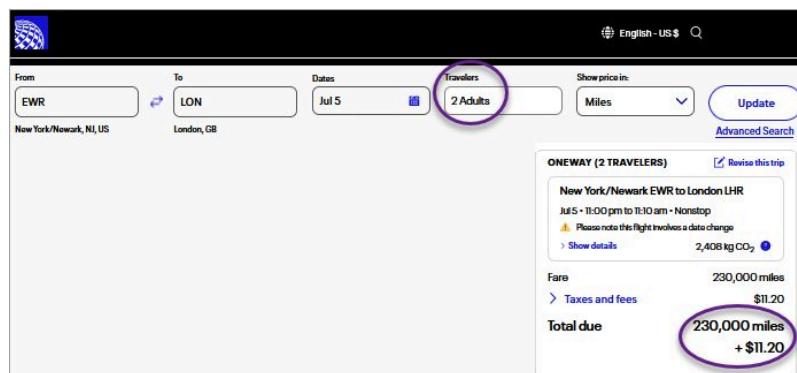

HERE'S HOW WE DID IT

We searched for one seat, and United offered us a seat for 80,000 miles.

The screenshot shows a flight search interface. The search parameters are: From EWR (Newark, NJ, US), To LON (London, GB), Dates Jul 5, and Travellers 1 Adult. The results show a one-way flight from Newark to London LHR on July 5, departing at 11:00 pm and arriving at 11:10 am, nonstop. The fare is 80,000 miles, taxes and fees are $5.60, and the total due is 80,000 miles + $5.60. A note indicates a data change.

We then searched for two seats, on the same day, and United offered the same flight for 230,000 miles (115,000 miles each).

The screenshot shows a flight search interface. The search parameters are: From EWR (Newark, NJ, US), To LON (London, GB), Dates Jul 5, and Travellers 2 Adults. The results show a one-way flight from Newark to London LHR on July 5, departing at 11:00 pm and arriving at 11:10 am, nonstop. The fare is 230,000 miles, taxes and fees are $11.20, and the total due is 230,000 miles + $11.20. A note indicates a data change.

We did a menu update and changed it back to one traveler to try and get that same 80,000 miles seat United offered first.

It was then priced at 115,000 miles for only one seat. So, even when we updated the menu to change the number of seats back to one, United still offered the single seat for 115,000 miles.

...United then again offered us one seat for 80,000 miles.

So we purchased that one seat for 80,000 miles and then purchased the second seat at 115,000 miles for a total of 195,000 miles instead of the 230,000 miles that was offered when we asked for two seats together.

I'd argue that's a fairly simple workaround – only a few minutes of work – that saved 35,000 miles. You're welcome!

Sample Savings Using Partner Miles

The round-trip cost of a Business Class ticket using United miles, a Chase transfer partner, between Washington, DC, and Geneva is 160,000 miles (80,000 each way). But Amex transfer partner Air Canada charges cost is 120,000 miles, All Nippon charges 100,000 miles, and LifeMiles' cost is 126,000 miles, round-trip.

No Miles? No Problem

All Nippon is a points-to-miles transfer partner of Amex. You can buy up to 500,000 annually from Amex Membership Rewards for 2.5 cents each. Check out FCF's How to buy American Express Membership Rewards points, and Beginner's Guide: how to play the "Buy Miles to Fly In Style."

Given the baseline fare is $4,980, and you can save by buying 100,000 Amex Rewards Points for about $2,500. Taxes with All Nippon Airways loyalty program generally cost $306, for a total of $2,806. You can use cash to buy points if you don't have enough or any points, and save up to $2,174, or 44%.

Air Canada is currently running a deal whereby miles can be acquired for as low as 1.28¢ each (includes taxes and processing fee), through a new up to 100% bonus buy-miles promo, which runs through July 19, 2024.

You can buy 140,000 Air Canada miles for about $1,795 when on sale ($3,641 when not on sale), and include taxes with Air Canada's loyalty program, which generally costs $80, for a total of $1,875. Use cash to buy miles if you don't have enough or any miles, and save up to $3,105, or 62%, compared to the baseline fare of $4,980.
