Crafting Excellence

Headquartered in Menlo Park, Supple Homes, Inc is meeting Silicon Valley's high demand for new custom homes

Sean Supple didn't take the conventional path to becoming one of the San Francisco Peninsula's most trusted custom homebuilders. With a law degree and experience as a licensed Realtor, he was introduced to something unexpected when working alongside a friend in contracting: work he genuinely loved.

Starting at $10 an hour, one remodel led to another, then to hiring his first employees, and ultimately founding Supple Homes, Inc. "It just sort of happened," he laughs. "I loved it."

More than two decades later, that passion has grown into a highly regarded custom homebuilding company trusted with some of the Peninsula's most ambitious residences. Supple Homes specializes in architect-led new construction and major renovations, where architectural complexity, exacting details, and significant investment demand an exceptional level of experience and care.

"We've established systems and processes to handle these large, expensive, very bespoke homes," Supple says. "Our core values are having a hunger to evolve, enjoying the process, and harboring no hidden agendas. Clients trust we always have their best interests at heart."

For Supple, building an extraordinary home is only part of the responsibility. His team brings clarity to a complex process, communicates openly, and provides experienced guidance throughout the journey.

"I love learning about clients," says Supple. "We see ourselves not just as contractors, but as trusted advisors. We're in the business of building long-term relationships that earn the client's trust from the very beginning."

That philosophy shapes both the company's culture and its approach to every project. Supple Homes believes an exceptional home deserves an equally exceptional building experience—one grounded in partnership, transparency, craftsmanship, and respect for the client's vision and investment.

For Supple, it's about creating remarkable homes while making the journey of building them something clients can genuinely enjoy.
