

Kula joins UK Wholesale Digital Markets Champion Industry Taskforce

Appointment gives Kula a voice in a major UK industry initiative focused on accelerating the adoption of tokenised wholesale financial markets

- Kula joins a cross-industry Taskforce bringing together organisations from traditional finance, digital assets and market infrastructure
- Taskforce supports the UK's ambition to develop a scalable tokenised wholesale financial markets ecosystem

London, 25th September 2026 - Kula, the company bringing governance, investment and tokenisation together for real-world assets, has joined the Wholesale Digital Markets Champion Industry Taskforce, a cross-industry initiative bringing together organisations from across traditional finance, digital assets and market infrastructure.

The Taskforce forms part of the UK Government's Wholesale Financial Markets Digital Strategy and is led by Wholesale Digital Markets Champion Christopher Woolard CBE. Its work is focused on supporting the development of a tokenised wholesale financial markets ecosystem and accelerating the adoption of digital technologies across UK markets.

Kula will participate in the wider Taskforce forum, contributing input through Taskforce meetings and engagement with its Action Groups. The Digital Markets Champion Secretariat has confirmed Kula's membership and encouraged the company to contribute agenda items and input through the Taskforce process.

The programme comes as the UK moves from experimentation towards the practical adoption of tokenisation at scale, with work spanning areas including digital issuance, secondary markets, tokenised collateral, payments and settlement infrastructure, interoperability, legal frameworks and financial crime compliance.

Chris Turner, Co-Founder of Kula, said: "Tokenisation is moving beyond experimentation towards real-world financial infrastructure. For that transition to succeed, technology alone isn't enough. Strong governance, legal clarity and infrastructure that institutions can use with confidence will be critical. Joining the Taskforce gives Kula the opportunity to contribute our experience in governance, digital assets and real-world asset tokenisation to an important industry conversation about how these markets develop. We look forward to contributing and working alongside organisations from across the financial market's ecosystem."

Kula's participation follows its recent work on Title Tokenisation, exploring how ownership rights to real-world assets can be represented on chain through regulated governance, custody and issuance infrastructure.

The initiative reflects Kula's wider focus on the infrastructure surrounding tokenisation including ownership rights, governance, custody and transfer mechanisms rather than digital representation alone.

The Taskforce brings together organisations from across the financial ecosystem, including financial institutions, market infrastructure providers and digital asset companies, to provide industry input and support collaboration as the UK's wholesale digital markets strategy develops.

The first Taskforce meeting is scheduled for October.
