Opportunity

While most providers sell access to national networks, Elevate has invested millions building dedicated business fibre and wireless into London's infrastructure.

Our network is for business users only, offering uncontended symmetrical speeds up to 10 Gbps.

Our local network engineers build, manage and maintain the network, getting customers connected in days, not months.

Post Pandemic

London's economic recovery initially lagged behind other cities due to a slower return to working in offices and the widespread adoption of hybrid working models. But now, we're witnessing a resurgence, with economic activity returning to pre-pandemic levels.

This revival is driving increased demand for connectivity, network infrastructure, security, and cloud services as businesses adapt to the new digital landscape

Our commitment

Elevate has over 200 staff, serving over 1,500 customers nationwide.

The acquisition of Luminet in 2023 reaffirmed our commitment to the Capital, adding 100 Gbps resilient wireless infrastructure to our owned, core network.

We can get London's businesses connected faster and with 100% uptime available.

Made for London

We're incredibly proud of our work in London. Our owned wireless and fibre connectivity, installed by our local engineers, bring London's businesses the speed and service they deserve.

As a key connectivity provider to London businesses we are a cornerstone to the local business community, helping to build a thriving, regional economy by:

Boosting communication and collaboration

Reliable, high-speed internet empowers businesses to communicate effortlessly, both internally and globally, while enabling the use of collaborative tools like Teams, Zoom, shared workspaces, and cloud services. Powering productivity, keeping operations running smoothly.

Attracting business through infrastructure advantage

Cutting-edge connectivity makes regions more attractive to tech, finance, and creative industries that rely on digital operations. This advantage helps drive investment and attract businesses that depend on fast, reliable internet.

Creating jobs, developing skills and expanding opportunities

Expanding local businesses through robust connectivity generates new jobs, strengthening the regional economy. Reliable networks also enable remote work, allowing companies to widen their talent pool.

Supporting Zero Carbon London

Sadiq Khan has committed to a goal of making London zero-carbon by 2030. Connectivity will play a key role in supporting smart energy grids, electric vehicle infrastructure, and efficient waste management systems.

"I would have no hesitation recommending Elevate Wholesale – working with them has been a breath of fresh air, especially when we've got the building preconnected."
