

Simon perched by his bedroom window, doodling towers, stars, and curious faces in his green notebook.

Outside, birds chirped and the sun shimmered on the sidewalk. Then, a little orange cat with a blue ribbon darted through the open gate, chasing something Simon couldn't see.

Simon tilted his head. That wasn't any ordinary visitor!

Simon hurried outside with his notebook and teal backpack to find Spark pawing at a patch of magical purple clover.

Suddenly, Simon glimpsed colorful paper floating near the old library. Was Spark leading him to an adventure?

Simon smiled and followed.

"Wait for me, Spark!" laughed Simon.

Spark pranced along the cracked path to the big library doors. At the steps, Simon noticed a sign: "Careers Day Today! Discover what you love!"

Simon's heart beat faster. What would he discover inside?

WHAT YOU LOVE!

Inside the library, Simon heard voices and laughter echoing through bright halls.

Tables were filled with costumes, tools, and funny hats—each showing a different job. Spark hopped onto a chair, sniffing a doctor's stethoscope.

Simon wandered, enchanted by the colorful displays.

Then, Simon noticed Ms. Maple, the friendly library helper in the purple hat, standing by a blank canvas.

She smiled at Simon. “Would you like to try something new? Paint your dream, and it will show you a surprise.”

Spark meowed loudly, as if agreeing.

Simon dipped a brush into blue paint.

He drew rockets, trees, and caring faces.
Each stroke felt exciting but also a little confusing.

Spark swished his tail, and Ms. Maple whispered, “It’s okay to mix ideas. That’s where magic begins.”

Simon paused, tapping his beaded bracelet.
His dreams didn't look like anyone else's.

But he remembered Ms. Maple's words and Spark's hopeful gaze. Simon smiled and kept painting, trusting his own ideas.

Soon, a shimmering path appeared on his drawing!

The painted path twinkled brighter and brighter. Simon touched it, and suddenly, sparkling colors circled around him.

He was flying through his own dreams: building rocket ships, planting magical gardens, and helping joyful friends.

Simon gently floated back to the art corner.
Spark jumped into his lap, purring.

Ms. Maple gave Simon's hand a squeeze. "You made something only you could dream. That's truly special."

Simon felt proud and full of magic.

When it was time to leave, Simon carried his painting home.

Spark trotted beside him, and Simon looked up at the clouds, bursting with ideas.

He knew that whatever he dreamed, he had everything he needed inside.
