

Adam gazed out the big round window of the shiny spaceship.

Far away, colorful stars twinkled in the deep blue sky. Commander Comet walked over and said, “Adam, there’s a puzzle! Our starlight crystal is missing.”

Adam felt his heart beat faster. A real space mystery!

Nova, the friendly robot, whirred softly nearby.

Commander Comet said, “Without the crystal, our ship can’t collect energy from the stars!”

Adam nodded bravely. Nova beeped cheerfully, “Let’s search together!”

Adam smiled and felt ready to help.

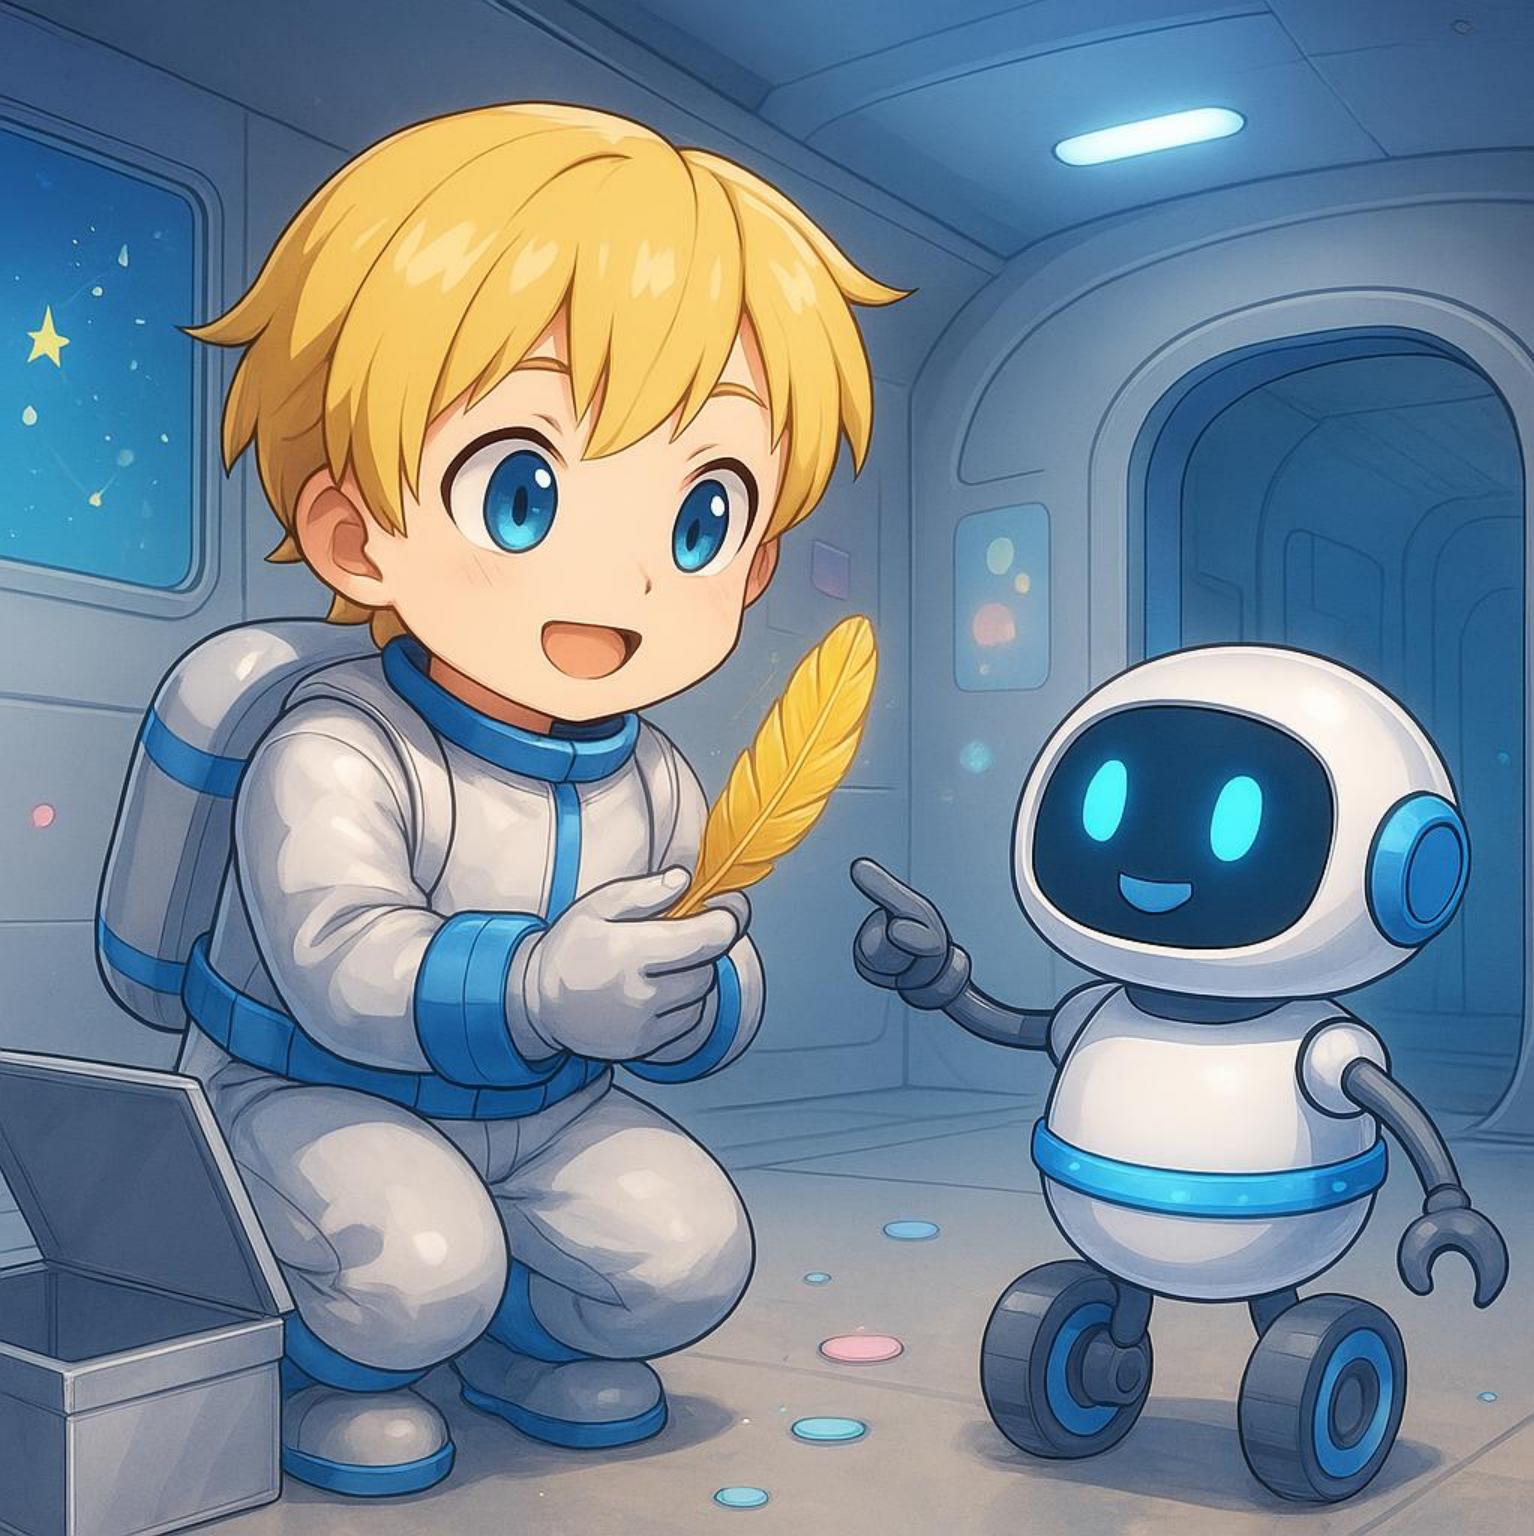

Outside the window, a swirl of colors flashed through space. Their adventure had begun.

Nova zipped over to a shimmering box near the wall. “Look! A golden feather! Maybe it’s a clue!”

Adam gently picked it up, feeling curious and brave.

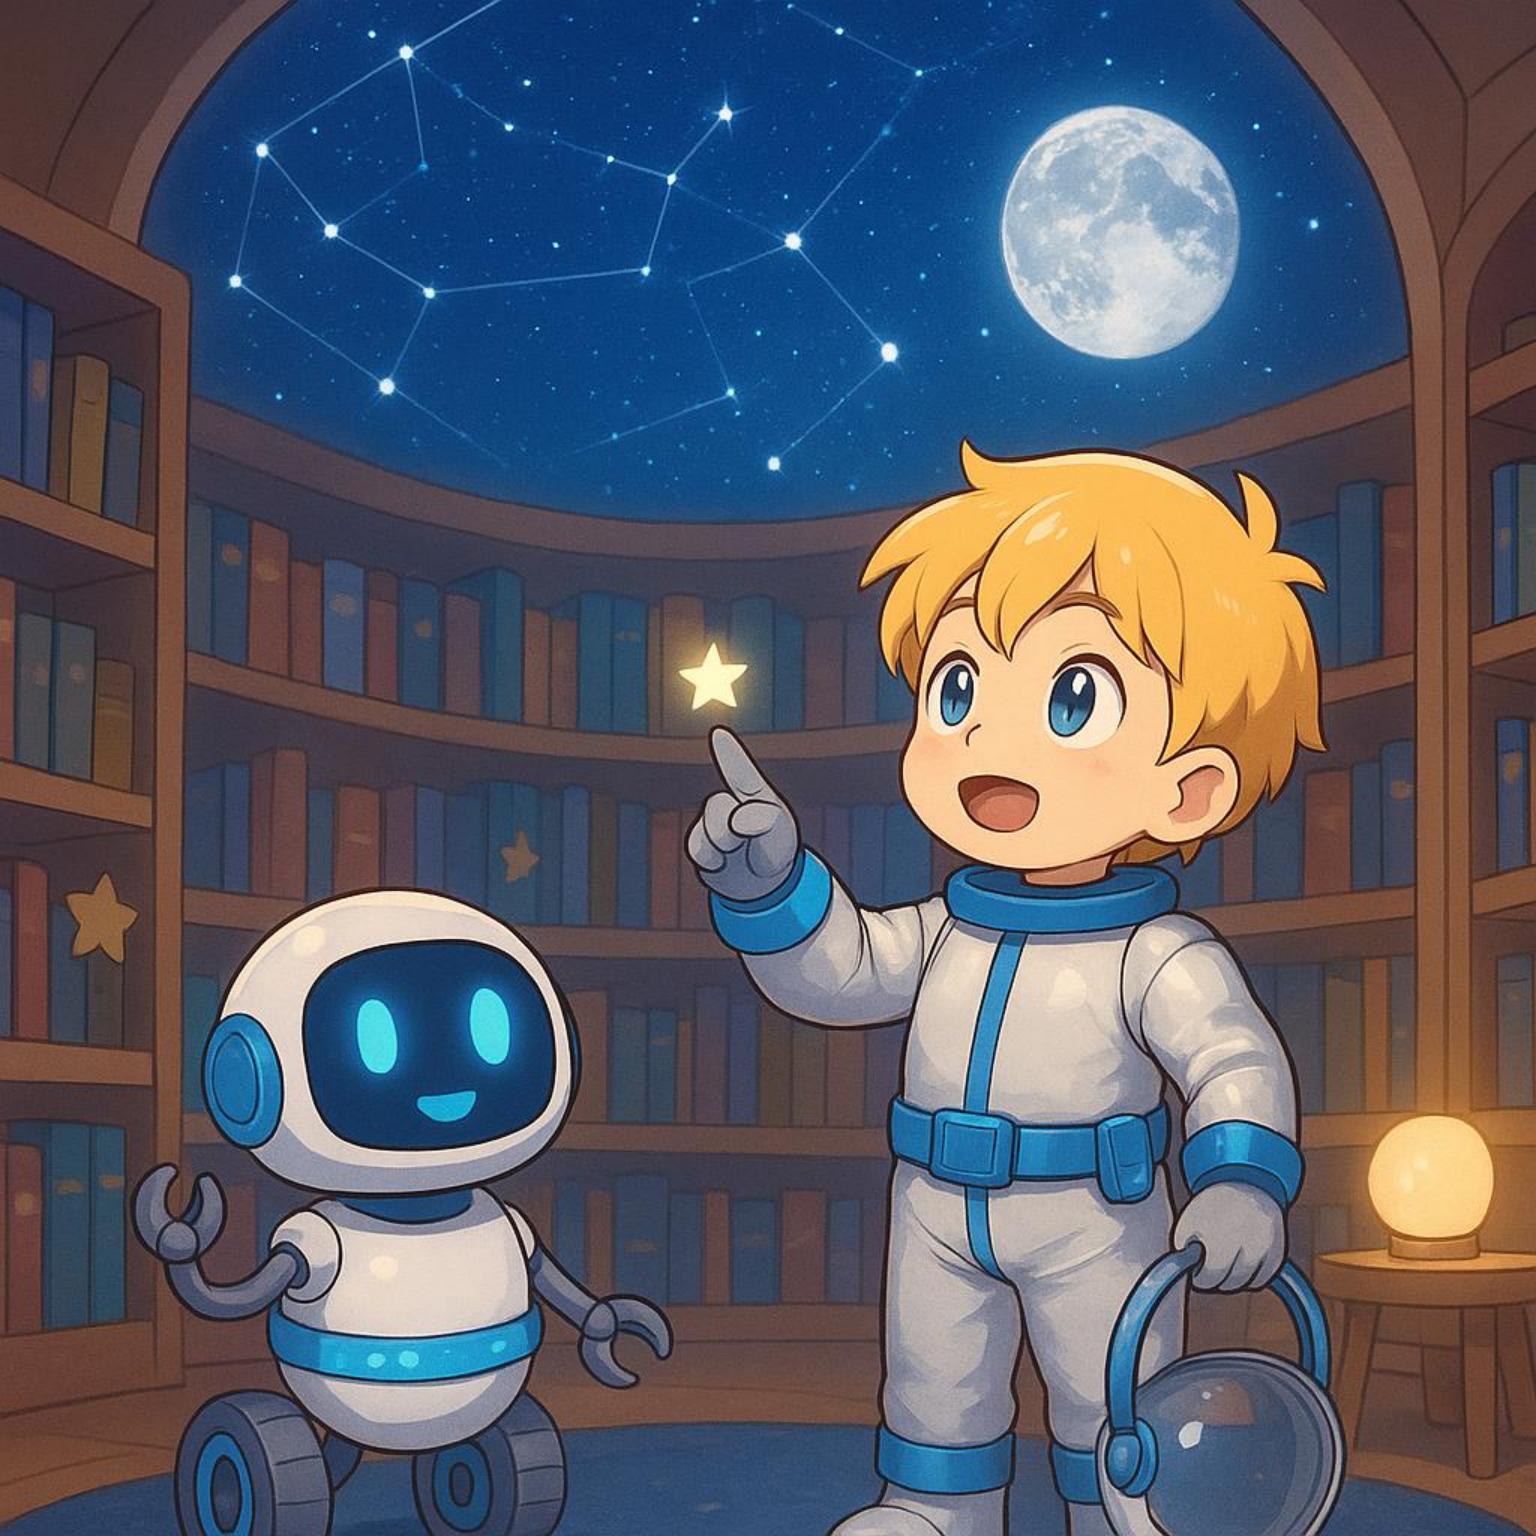

Nova’s lights blinked. “Let’s check the library, Adam!”

In the spaceship library, Adam and Nova spotted a map glowing on the wall.

A sparkling dot blinked beside a picture of the Moon. “Maybe the crystal floated that way!” Nova said.

Adam took a deep breath. It was time to explore beyond the ship.

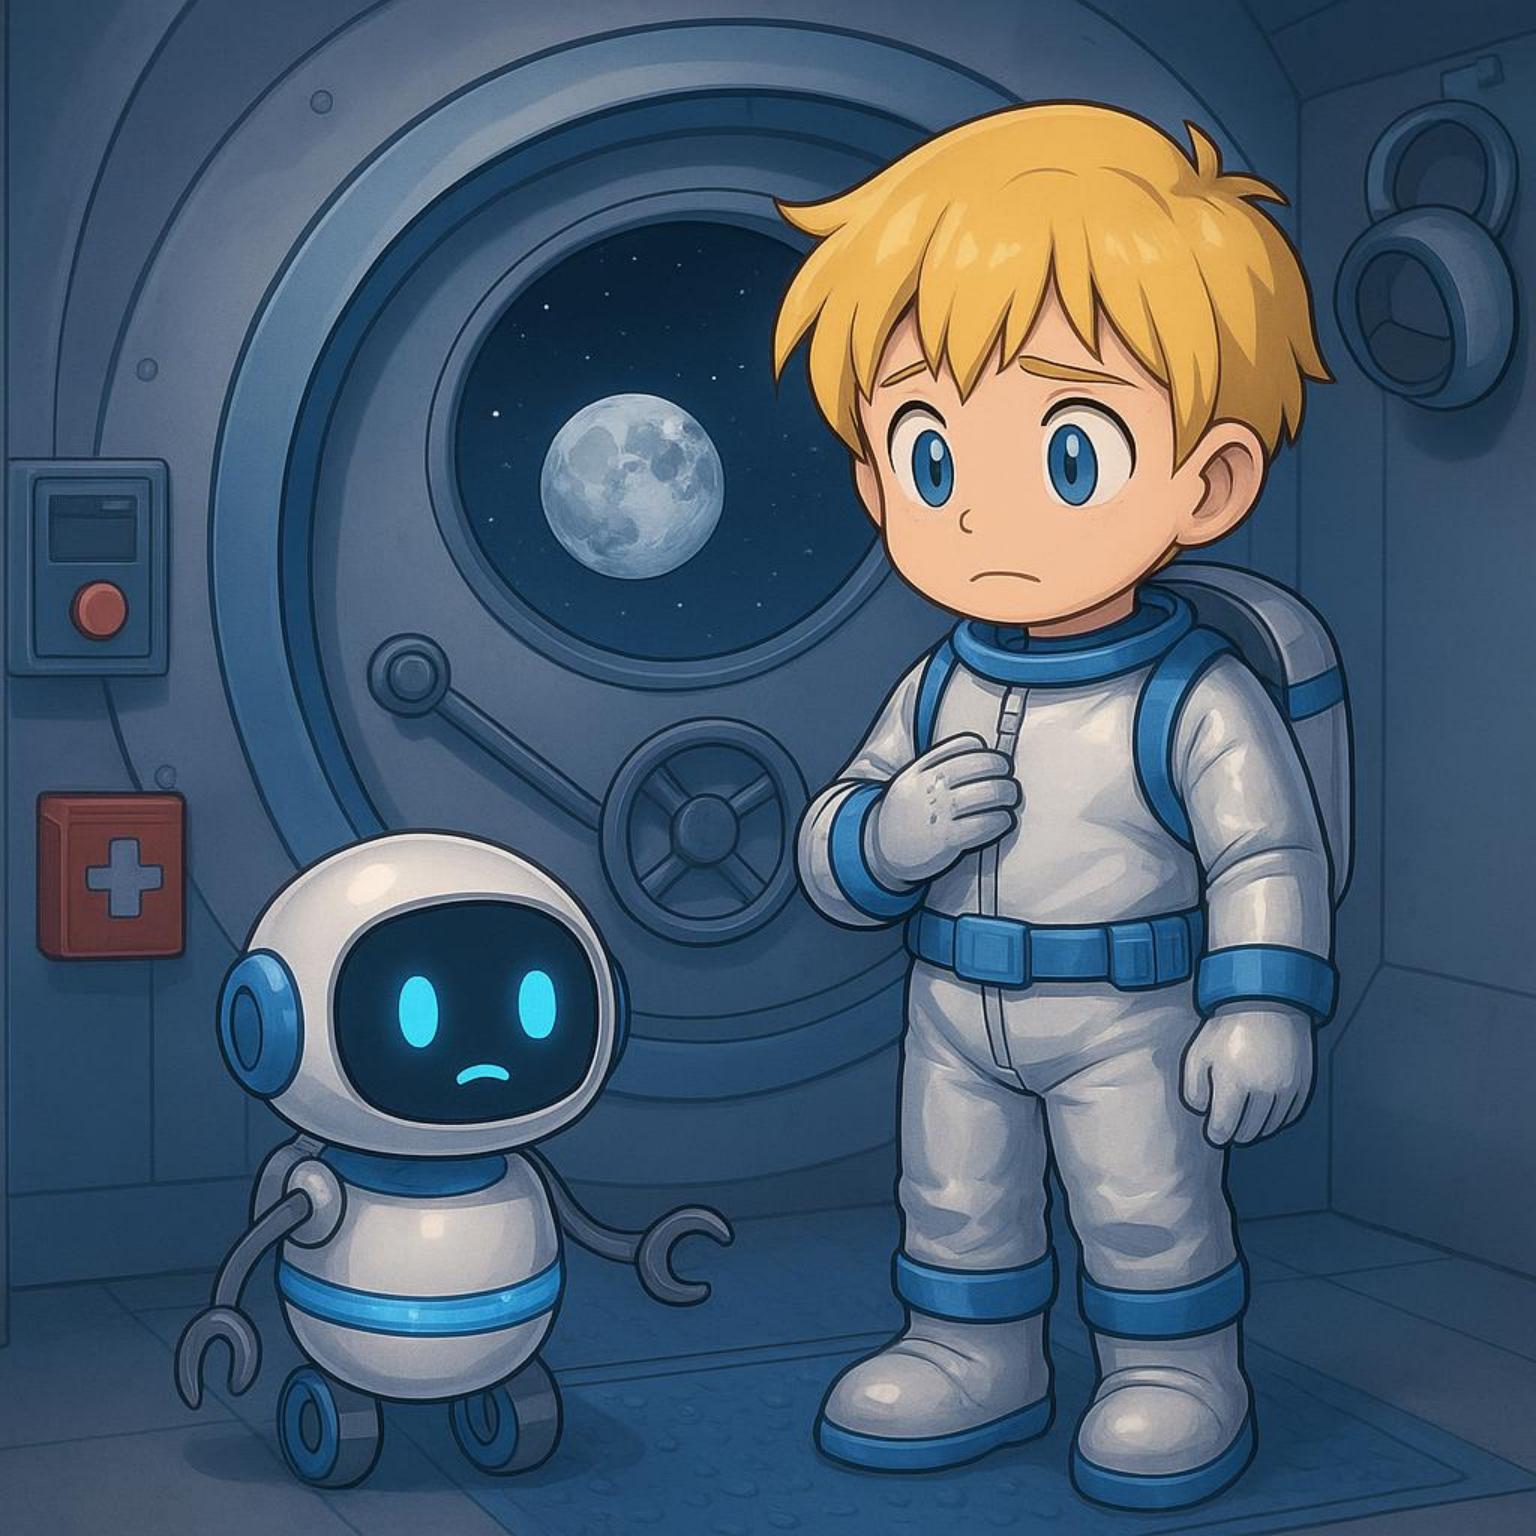

Adam suited up by the ship's round airlock door.

Nova quietly beeped, "What if the crystal is lost forever?"

For a moment, Adam felt a worry twist inside his tummy.

The Moon looked far away through the glass.

Before they could leave, Commander Comet hurried in holding a sparkly blue notebook.

He smiled kindly, “Sometimes you find things when you least expect them.”

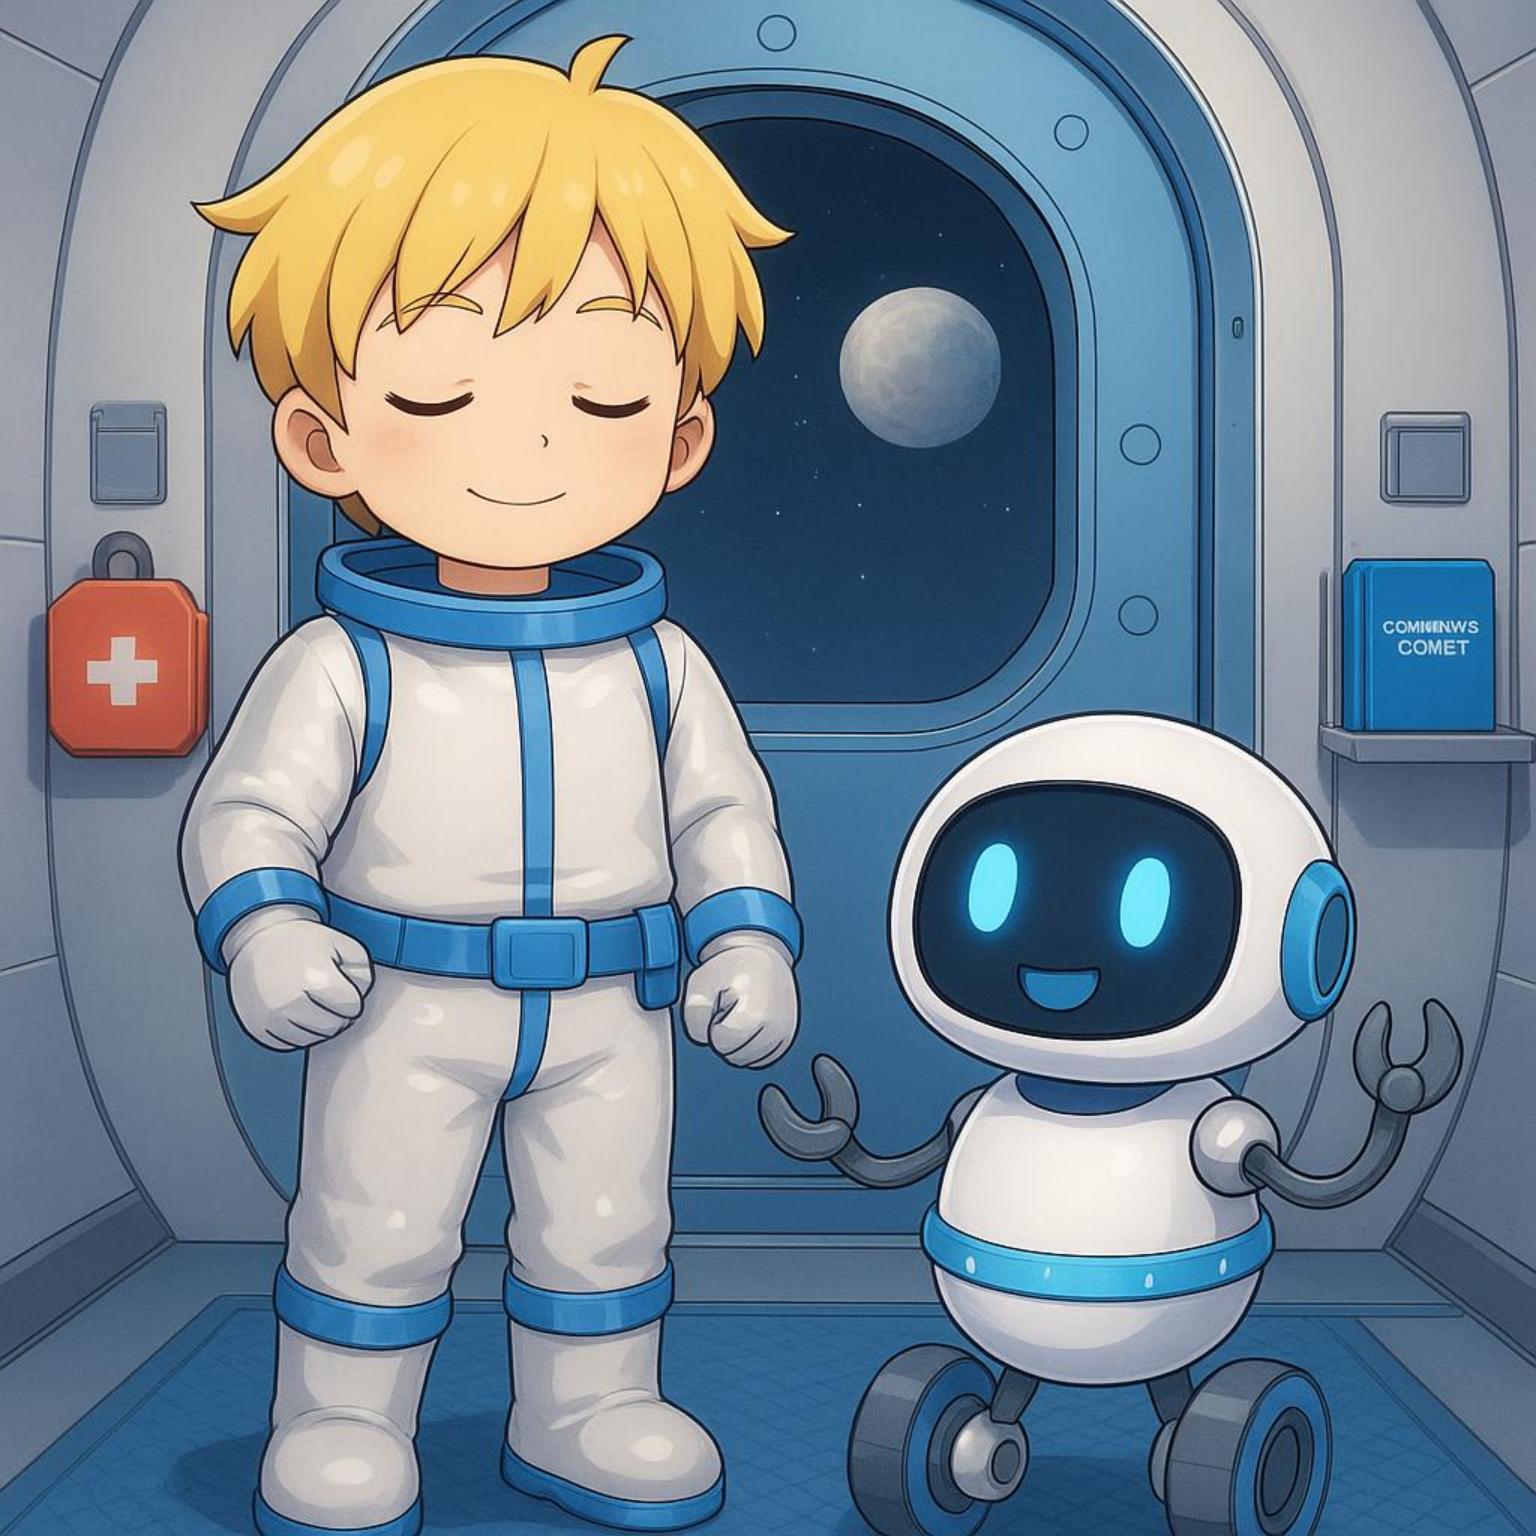

Commander Comet winked. Adam almost forgot to feel nervous.

Adam closed his eyes, remembering everyone's kind words.

Nova said softly, "We believe in you, Adam."

Adam felt stronger. He opened his eyes, ready to solve the mystery.

COMET

"Look! Nova, the feather's tiny tip glows blue, just like the crystal!" Adam shouted.

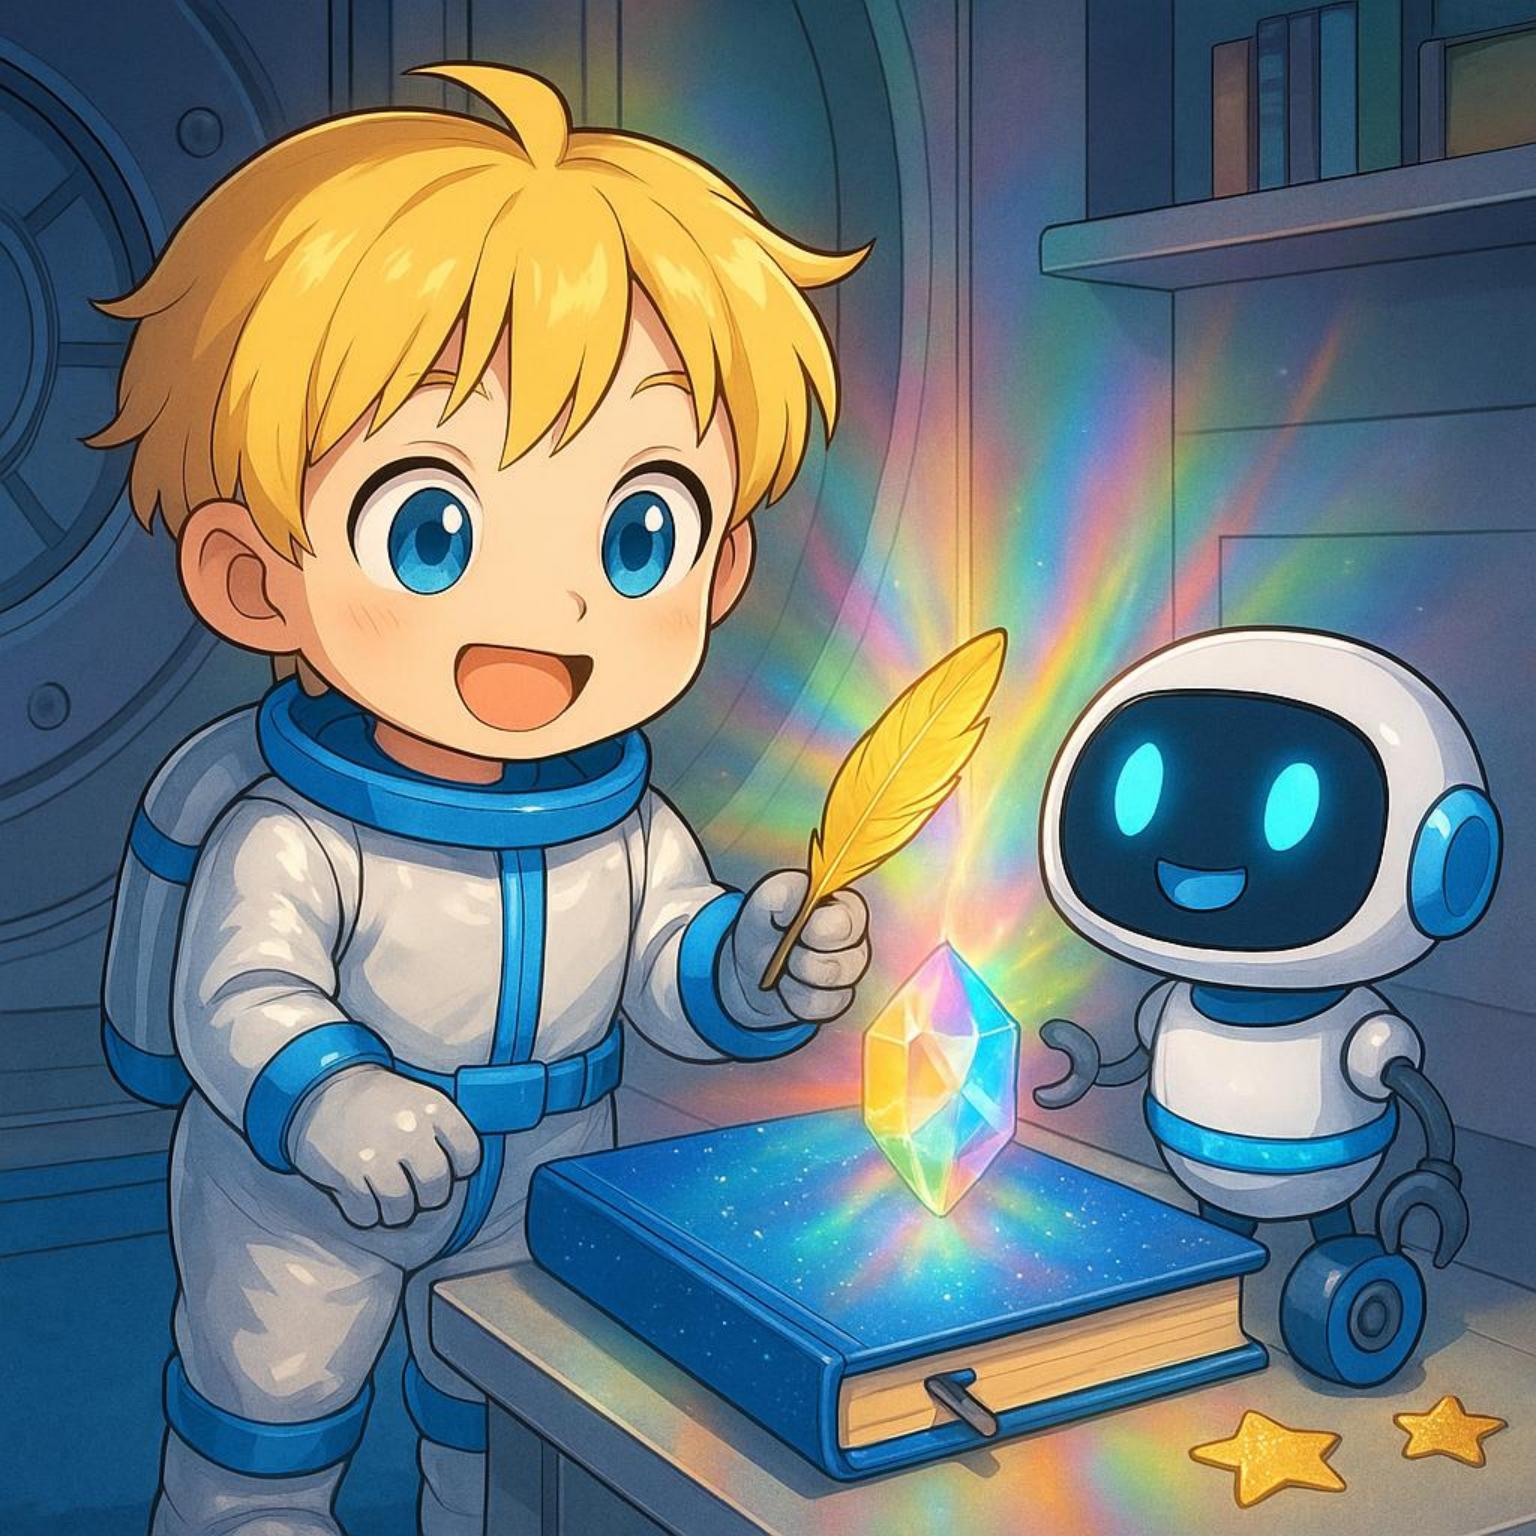

Nova whirred with excitement. She pointed to the notebook. "Maybe a feather is a special space key!"

Adam gently pressed the golden feather tip into a tiny slot on the notebook's cover.

A secret compartment popped open!

Inside, the lost starlight crystal sparkled with every color of the galaxy.

Commander Comet arrived and cheered,
“Adam, you did it!”

Adam placed the dazzling starlight crystal carefully in its special spot by the window. The whole ship shimmered with light. Nova giggled and beeped happily. Adam smiled extra wide. He knew he could be brave and clever—just by being himself.
