London, UK - 29 August 2025 - Elusive Sense: On the Fluid Boundaries of Perception is a group exhibition showcasing the work of five leading contemporary artists from Poland who each explore the impact of technology on the sensory landscape. Presented as part of the UK / Poland Season 2025, a diverse cultural dialogue taking place in over 100 art events across 40 cities in the two countries, Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception is curated by Anna Szylar, a specialist who focuses on the intersection of culture, art and new technologies.

The exhibition will be staged in two parts: at Centerspace in Bristol and art'otel London Hoxton from 5 September – 4 October with a series of events highlighting the central themes of the exhibition and how they extend through to fashion, design and music.

The London element of Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception will be launched during London Design Festival with a preview on Saturday 20 September celebrating the pioneering practice of Cosmodernism, Agnieszka Mastalerz, panGenerator, Janek Simon and Iga Węglińska, with introductions by participating artists.

Technology has permeated every aspect of daily life with our shared experience of the world becoming inextricably interwoven with it. Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception considers how this is impacting the sensory landscape and probes the challenges that technology's ever-expanding entity poses to humanity. Each of the artists explores how technology becomes not just a tool but an active agent that shapes our bodies, minds, our perception of reality and our understanding of ourselves. Does technology enhance our senses, or does it lead to their functions being transferred to systems on which we are ever more dependent? Does this mediated sensation allow us to survive in an increasingly stimulating reality, or does it strip us of a vital plane for maintaining authentic contact with the world around us?

Aleksandra Szymańska, Director, Creative Industries Institute (CRPK): *"Poland's Creative Tech sector is rapidly evolving, blending art, culture, and cutting-edge technology. As digital tools, artificial intelligence, and immersive experiences reshape how we create and engage audiences, Polish innovators and startups are co-creating a new wave of creativity — merging tradition with technological breakthroughs and redefining the future of the creative industry. Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception is an opportunity for Creative Industries Institute to further support the visionary community with five artists who each explore the impact of technology on humanity in a captivating showcase of pioneering artistic talent in Poland."*

Anna Szylar, Curator, Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception: "Elusive Sense brings together the very best artists working in Poland who are harnessing the opportunities that technology presents us with to interrogate the very possibilities it offers. How will technology impact our senses and does this add to or take away from our shared experience as humanity. Cosmodernism, Agnieszka Mastalerz, panGenerator, Janek Simon and Iga Węglińska each offer a unique and compelling perspective on what I perceive to be the most urgent questions of our time. We are thrilled to exhibit their work in Bristol and in London during the Design Festival - a moment when the international creative community is championed in the UK's capital."

Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception is organised by Creative Industries Institute (CRPK), an institution created to support and connect creative industries. The exhibition at art'otel in London is co-organised by On&On Designs, a cultural studio and events curator that supports European creatives in entering and influencing the UK market, particularly in design, retail, interiors and placemaking. The UK/Poland Season 2025 is initiated by the British Council and co-organised by the Adam Mickiewicz Institute and the Polish Cultural Institute.

Curatorial Text by Anna Szylar

The artistic dialogue established between the works of Iga Węglińska and Agnieszka Mastalerz is underpinned by a palpable tension that considers the central questions posed by the curatorial direction of Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception. Węglińska's work, rooted in transhumanism and the anthropology of the body, examines the limits of human communication. Agnieszka Mastalerz focuses on the mechanisms of control inherent in our relationship with technology.

Another theme addressed in the exhibition is the nature of the digital image, exploring not only its creation and consumption but its life cycle. In their installation Hash to ash, the art collective panGenerator poignantly illustrates the fragility of digital memories by transforming the viewer's selfie, taken in the exhibition, into a handful of physical ash. Seen alongside Infinity, the collective's second piece on display, the works serve as a critique of the hypnotic and exhausting search for visual stimulation on social media. Kamil Czapiga's (known as Cosmodernism) works, appear to be computer-generated video, but are in fact ecosystems of living organisms observed under a microscope. Czapiga creates "science fiction, but without the fiction".

Janek Simon's series 'Meta Folklore' enters into a direct confrontation with the influence of artificial intelligence on our understanding of heritage, tradition, and identity. Simon's work poses a crucial question about the future: will artificial intelligence enable the birth of a new, rich, and syncretic global culture, or will it flatten history and identity?

Elusive Sense: On The Fluid Boundaries Of Perception does not attempt to offer simple answers. Instead, it invites viewers into a space of active reflection on our cyborgian present.

Cosmodernism - is the intermedia art project of Kamil Czapiga, initiated in 2019 in Katowice, Poland. The Cosmodernism project incorporates abstract video art and photography with original sound design and experimental activities. The main idea behind his work is the search for a personal abstract expression, achieved through the exploration of micro and macro observation combined with specially composed soundscapes. As the building blocks for his films, Czapiga often uses various chemicals, dyes, and objects, capturing the physical and chemical reactions that occur between them. Although many of his works appear to be computer-generated, they are not created using CGI or digital techniques. They are, in fact, real objects seen from an unreal perspective—what the artist describes as "science fiction but without the fiction."

Creative
Industries
Institute

CRPK is a cultural institution that develops creative industries through a public support system, knowledge gathering, networking, promotion, responding to the needs of sectors and building synergies with other areas of development and innovation.

The scope of CRPK's activities includes supporting the development of Polish creative industries, in particular the audiovisual sector, multimedia, the gaming industry (gamedev), design, fashion, artistic crafts, music, as well as technologies and innovations that influence the development of these industries.

ON&ON^{DESIGNS}

On&On Designs not only promotes innovative design but actively fosters cultural dialogue. The company organizes debates, exhibitions, and events that bridge design and architecture, encouraging conversations on creativity's role in shaping contemporary spaces and experiences. By connecting designers, architects, and cultural institutions, On&On Designs creates a platform for meaningful exchange. Dedicated to supporting both emerging and established talents, the company introduces new creative voices to cultural initiatives, brands, retailers, and interior architects. On&On Designs also advises on expertly crafted products by European designers and represents select designers and brands in the UK, facilitating collaboration with companies and international partners.

Polish Cultural Institute in London

Based in London, the Polish Cultural Institute is a part of the Polish diplomatic mission, dedicated to nurturing and promoting cultural ties between the United Kingdom and Poland, both through British exposure to Poland's cultural achievements, and through exposure of Polish artists and scholars to British trends, institutions, and professional counterparts.

The function of the Polish Cultural Institute is to showcase Polish heritage and contemporary Polish culture for Britain's multicultural audience, particularly in London as it is truly the leading global cultural capital. Our programme covers the visual arts, film, theatre, music and literature.

The UK/Poland Season 2025

The UK/Poland Season 2025 is a diverse programme of over 100 multi-artform events in 40 cities in both countries. The Season will invigorate the UK-Poland cultural dialogue in addressing global challenges, and will open new opportunities for cultural leaders and the next generation of artists.

Events in Poland are organised and funded by the British Council, while in the UK they are led by the Adam Mickiewicz Institute, the Polish Cultural Institute, and the British Council. The organisation of the Season in the UK would not be possible without the support of the Ministry of Culture and National Heritage and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Poland.

The Season takes place from March to November 2025.
