Hawkins Construction

Carpentry for new tertiary gym facility

Hawkins engaged Farrell Construction to provide carpentry services for the new gymnasium at the Christchurch Polytechnic Institute of Technology (now Ara Institute of Canterbury). Part of a larger campus redevelopment, the new sports facility was designed to provide modern sport and recreation spaces for students and the wider community.

Farrell supplied foremen and a team of 20+ trade-qualified carpenters to deliver the full carpentry and general builder's work packages. Working collaboratively with Hawkins, our team ensured the project was completed to the required standard and on programme.

The gymnasium now serves Ara's students and wider community, providing a purpose-built contemporary sports facility that will support their A-game for years to come.
