Plastic bags containing the shredded remains of Palestinian children brutally slaughtered by the Israeli state. This is all their families have to bury.

Israel Murders Children With Our Tax Money

A new horror has begun. On August 20th, the world watched as the Israeli military launched a massive, full-scale ground invasion of Gaza. This is not a targeted operation; it is the bloody next chapter in a campaign that has already leveled neighborhoods, shattered entire families, and created a humanitarian hellscape. For working people here in the American South, watching this unfold on shaky phone screens and grainy news feeds, it feels both a world away and terrifyingly close. Because our silence—and more damningly, our government's unwavering complicity—is paid for with our own dignity and our own paychecks.

The billions sent abroad to fuel this invasion are billions stolen from our communities. Every bomb that falls on Gaza is a community health clinic that won't be built in Alabama. Every F-35 fighter jet is a year of tuition for a thousand kids in Georgia. Every blank check for occupation is a stark reminder that our government values foreign control over domestic well-being.
