

Crip Camp Screening +
Section 504 Panel
A social narrative

Today, I am visiting Film Streams' Ruth Sokolof Theater.

I am attending the screening of Crip Camp today. We will watch the movie and then listen to a panel discussion about Section 504.

I can park in the lot behind Film Streams for free and use the sidewalk on 14th Street to get into the theater. To get to this parking lot, you take 14th Street and turn between Cuming and Mike Fahey Streets.

There is on-street, metered parking in front of the theater on Mike Fahey Street and 14th Street.

There is accessible parking in the lot and on-street parking.

Once inside, I can go to the box office to reserve a ticket, or go to the will-call table and find my ticket.

In the lobby, I will find concessions and can pick up my free popcorn or find a place to sit while I wait for the theater to open.

If I need a restroom, they are located in the hallway next to the theater entrance.

There are accessible stalls in both restrooms.

Child changing tables are available in both restrooms.

If I need a quiet space, I can use the room located next to the restrooms.

When I enter the theater, there will be areas for accessible seating or I can go up the stairs for other seating.

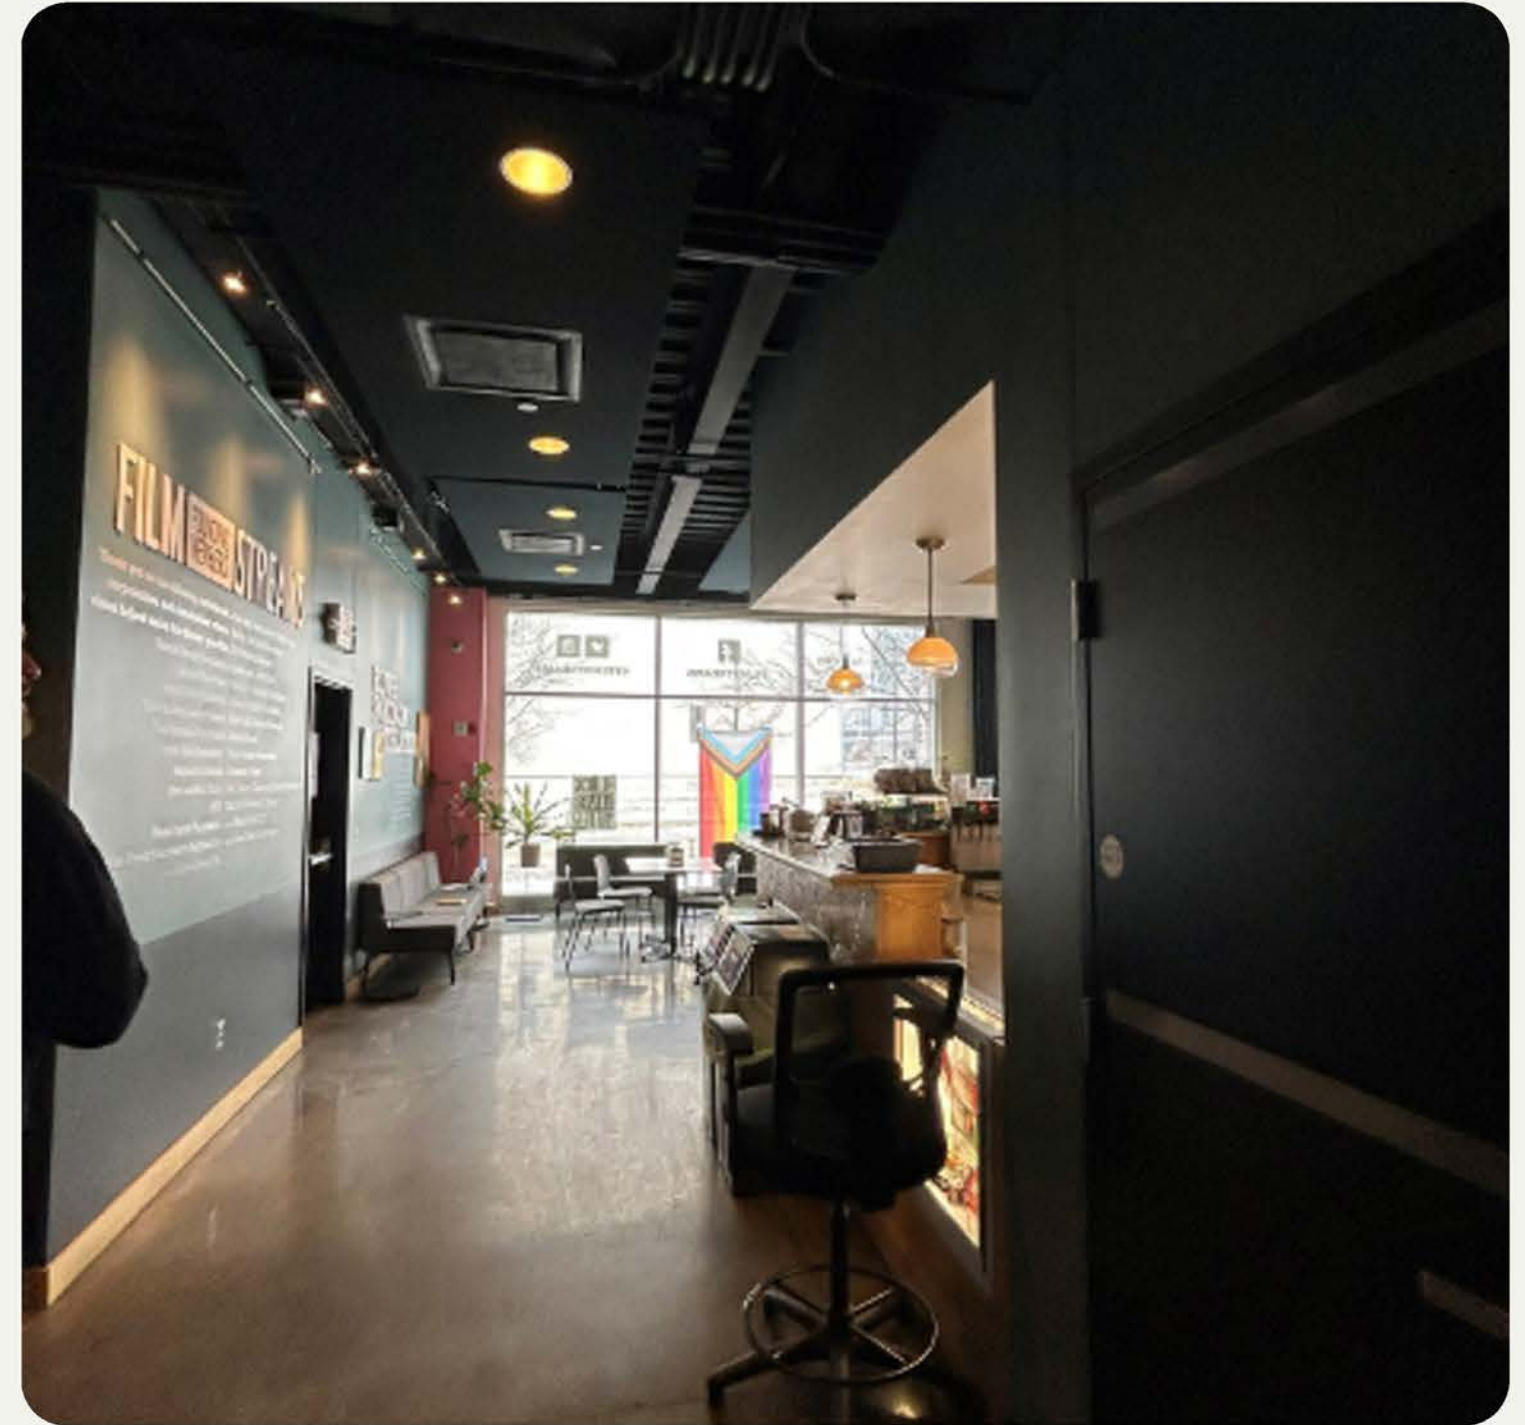

After the film is over, I can stay in my seat to hear from the Section 504 panel. I can ask a question or just listen.

When the event is over, I will leave the way that I came in.

I had a good time at the screening of Crip Camp and Section 504 panel!

How am I doing?
