

Mission-driven to support Nevada Workforce

Our work supports the two main drivers of Nevada's workforce — employers and workers. There are four keyways we support these groups:

Job-specific worker training

We connect career seekers with job training in high-growth industries, including healthcare, manufacturing, logistics and digital technology. To ensure training is specific and relevant to employer needs, we partner with local training providers, including community colleges. We also provide funding for employers to offer upskilling and apprenticeships.

Assistance with barriers to training or work

Often, the thing standing between a worker and the new job they want is something we can help with. From transportation assistance to financial support for supplies and equipment, Nevadaworks connects eager career seekers with the resources they need to gain employment and get on a good career path with opportunities to advance. Whether the challenge is not having a GED or the right work clothes, Nevadaworks' talent development specialists help guide career seekers to the right support at no cost to them.

Connecting the right workers to employers

Think of Nevadaworks as a matchmaker for employers looking to hire. We work with employers to find out exactly what skills they need in a new employee and then find, or help train, the workers who best meet their needs. Working with Nevadaworks means employers won't need to sort through dozens, or even hundreds, of unqualified candidates to find a good match. This service supports our mission and is offered to employers and career seekers at no cost.

Employee upskilling

Employee development and upskilling support individual capabilities and career pathways and drives organizational success by aligning the skills in the workplace with evolving industry demands. Upskilling employees may include education and training in industry- or employer-specific work skills, basic job skills, technical computer skills, new technologies, equipment operation, soft skills, or certifications and credentials.

Nevadaworks offers support with upskilling programs at no cost to employers as part of our mission to strengthen Nevada's workforce.
