Indonesian Artists

Stefany Zevanya

Stefany Zefanya is a Jakarta-based Indonesian contemporary artist working primarily in watercolour, mixed media, and illustration. She is widely recognised for her iconic red-headed protagonist, Eleven, a recurring figure through which she translates the textures of everyday human experience into visual narrative.

Her practice moves across joy, emptiness, contentment, unconditional love, harsh self-criticism, and resilience, each work functioning as a visual metaphor for the duality inherent in lived experience. Beyond her signature caricature, Zefanya's body of work spans surrealism, anthropomorphic objects, deco figures, and digital portraiture, demonstrating consistent versatility across styles and media.

Her works may be understood as responses to personal inquiries that are further elaborated through interdisciplinary theoretical frameworks, particularly within psychology and related fields. Within this context, human decision making is examined through both cognitive and affective perspectives, situating behavior as the result of complex interactions between perception, experience, and various mental processes.

Stefany also incorporates findings from microbiome studies into her artistic exploration. Research in this field suggests that microorganisms within the human body play a significant role in the regulation of emotion, cognition, and behavior. This approach reveals that biological aspects often considered peripheral in fact hold an essential role in shaping the totality of human experience
