Our Travels in Europe in October: Cruise aboard the Celebrity Eclipse and stays In Venice and Athens, Part 2

Sixteen travelers. One unforgettable journey and the most beautiful cats you have ever seen!

October 13 – A Day Inside the Ancient World of Split

Split is a city that pulls you right in. We started with another joyful tuk tuk ride along the coast, with the wind in our hair and the most gorgeous views of the blue Adriatic.

Then came the highlight of the afternoon. Our walking tour was led by Mili Bilan, who was not only extremely knowledgeable, but also very nice and very tall. I mean very tall. Mili walked us through Diocletian's Palace and the town with such calm confidence that you could tell he had every corner of this city memorized. He explained the history with so much clarity that we felt like we were stepping right into ancient times. We really enjoyed him and appreciated how thoughtful and gentle he was with the entire group.

And then we experienced something unforgettable. Inside the palace we heard a wonderful group of men singing in a circular chamber where the acoustics were absolutely perfect. Their voices rose up into the stone dome and filled the entire space with the most beautiful sound. It gave all of us chills. It was one of those magical travel moments you do not plan, you just stumble into, and it stays with you forever.

Diocletian's Palace itself felt alive with history. This is not a museum at all but a living breathing place filled with cafes, music, and life. Ancient Roman walls stand right beside modern shops. Street performers play under stone arches. Everything feels layered with centuries of stories.

And Splits cats were right at home among the ruins, lounging on warm stones like they owned the entire palace. I understood them completely.

October 14 – Montenegro and Its Fairytale Beauty

Montenegro was like stepping straight into a painting. The mountains rose right up out of the water, the bay shimmered like glass, and the air felt soft and peaceful. Everywhere you looked, it was gorgeous.

We first visited the charming baroque town of Perast, a quiet little jewel along the water. From there we boarded a small boat and headed out to Our Lady of the Rocks, the famous tiny island built over centuries by sailors who dropped stones into the bay after every safe voyage. The church was beautiful and full of stories from men who thanked God after surviving storms and battles. The whole place felt sacred and full of history.

After returning to shore, we made our way to Kotor, and that entire town felt like a storybook come to life. Stone walls, red roofs, winding alleys, ancient churches, and squares full of charm. We wandered slowly through the old town, exploring its quiet corners and taking in the incredible scenery. The mountains rising behind the city were breathtaking.

And of course, Montenegro had its share of unforgettable cats. We saw them tucked into windows, sprawled in patches of sun, and roaming the little stone alleys like they were on official business. But the best moment of the day was when we watched a cat jump right up on a public fountain and leaned over to drink straight from the flowing water. It was the cutest thing, and we all burst out laughing. That cat was a character!

Montenegro surprised us with its beauty, its peacefulness, and its warm charm.

October 15 – Another Lovely Sea Day

We ate. We relaxed. We soaked in the sunshine. We laughed. It was glorious.
