MISSION STATEMENT

The LSU Center for Energy Studies (CES) maintains this curriculum vitae to document and showcase the scholarly and professional contributions of its faculty, researchers, and affiliated staff. This compilation reflects the Center's commitment to advancing energy-related research, education, and outreach in service to Louisiana, the Gulf Coast region, and beyond. By preserving the body of work, we aim to promote transparency, encourage collaboration, and highlight the breadth and impact of our efforts in energy policy, economics, science, and technology.

DISCLAIMER

Given the scope and evolving nature of CES-affiliated work, this curriculum vitae is accurate and complete to the best of our knowledge. CES was founded in 1982, and many contributions predate modern digital records. Therefore, the further back in time, coverage of CES activities included in this document likely attenuates.

LSU is working with global energy leaders and industry and communities in Louisiana to find new ways to fuel the nation - a core focus of the university's Scholarship First Agenda. The LSU Institute for Energy Innovation, launched in June 2022 with a $25 million gift from Shell, will serve as a national model for energy-related collaboration at the intersection of science and engineering with cross-disciplinary work across LSU's broad range of academic areas. Through the institute, leaders in energy-related thought, talent development and industry are investing in the pursuit of a shared vision for the future of energy rooted in five work streams: talent, research and development, policy and economics, social and environmental justice and technology transfer and commercialization.
